THREE CENTS

6 Slain, 300 Wounded In Paris Red Rioting; Blum Regime in Peril

Thousands Battle Police At Clichy in Attack On Rightists.

Communist Mob Seizes City Hall

75 Police Hurt; 3,000 on Guard; Premier Is Shaken.

By the Associated Press.

Paris (Wednesday), March 17.—Desperate rioting which was feared to have cost at least 6 lives in a Paris suburb and sent nearly 300 injured persons to hospitals early today threatened a break in the government of Premier Leon Blum.

Communist masses fought their Rightist political foes, government guards and police in the workers' stronghold of Clichy, just outside the gates of Paris, in a deadly battle which began last night and ended early this morning.

It was the worst rioting the capital has seen since the "bloody Tuesday" of February 6, 1934, and observers said they believed the fate of the popular front government of Premier Blum was in the balance.

Authorities of Beaujon Hospital, which treated most of the casualties, said four civilians and two policemen were dead.

They said several gravely wounded rioters had been removed by their comrades. Premier Blum, who with President Albert Lebrun, was attending a gala concert by the London Philharmonic Orchestra at the opera, was called from the concert and informed of the situation. He returned to the opera house, however, half an hour later.

The rioting flared forth following the attempt of thousands of Leftists to prevent members of the French Social Party (formerly the Croix de Feu) to hold a meeting in a Clichy motion picture theater to view a picture named "Battle."

Shops Are Wrecked.

The Communists did not evacuate the central square of Clichy until 1:15 a. m., leaving the town hall in the center of the battlefield scarred by bullets and shops wrecked, windows shattered and paving ripped up.

Several women were among the wounded.

The Communists declared they were battling to pervent "invasion (of their town) by the De La Rocquists." Six thousand to 7,000 took part in the demonstration.

(Col. Francois De La Rocque, outstanding leader of the military right, is chief of the French Social Party, which until last June was the semimilitarized organization called "Croix De Feu."

(The Blum government ordered it dissbandment a few days after the popular front came into power. It was later revived in the form of a political party of the right.)

A second Social Party meeting at Asnieres, just across the River Seine from Clichy, provoked a smaller counter demonstration by about 1,000 Communists.

3,000 Police Collect.

The rioting was not ended until about 3,000 police, mobile guards and mounted republican guards had been called out.

Among those wounded was Andre Blumel, chief of the Blum cabinet's secretariat, who was struck by bullets in one arm and leg when he went with other high officials to Clichy to attempt to quell the disorder.

He was rushed to the Beaujon Hospital. After an operation he was reported to be in a "satisfactory condition." Shortly after midnight Premier and Mme Blum visited the hospital to see Blumel and others injured.

Blum, pale and apparently much shaken, and Mme. Blum, weeping brokenly, drove home early today after a two-hour visit with Blumel and other wounded at the hospital.

Hostile shouts and hisses aimed at Marx Dormoy, minister of the interior, during the height of the conflict gave promise of a bitter Communist Party protest against the Blum government's use of armed guards against its Communist allies.

"Dormoy, resign!" the Communists shouted at the minister as he tried to address them through a window of the Clichy town hall, in which they had barred themselves.

Dormoy later issued an appeal:

"The government demands that all remain calm."

Reinforced police early this morning guarded the Chamber of Deputies, the ministries and other vital centers against rising political agitation.

Roger Langeron, prefect of police, said 75 police and guards were wounded, two by bullets.

Pierre Hennequin, police captain in command of the police forces, said that as far as he knew neither the police nor the guard had used their firearms against the crowd.

About midnight 125 Communists occupied the town hall and refused to budge in spite of police efforts to oust them. A cordon of 200 police was thrown around the building to prevent more Leftists from entering. From the steps of the hall Communist leaders harangued the crowds, urging them to be calm. Red flags were in evidence.

Sir Austen Chamberlain Dead; Framer of Locarno Treaty

Former Foreign Secretary of British Empire Succumbs at 73.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

London, March 16.—Sir Austen Chamberlain, famous statesman son of a famous statesman and "father" of the Locarno treaty, died unexpectedly tonight of a heart attack in his West End London home. He was 73 years old.

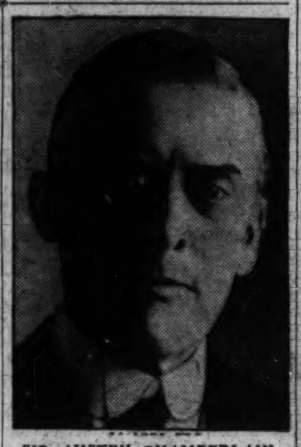
Dean of the Conservative elder statesmen in the House of Commons, he was chancellor of the exchequer twice, secretary of state for foreign affairs, and secretary of state for India, as well as a member of the war cabinet.

He was the elder son of Joseph Chamberlain, himself a distinguished British statesman, and a half brother of Neville Chamberlain, present chancellor of the exchequer.

It was said of him that he was one of the few men in British public life who "lived down the disadvantage of being the son of a famous man."

His death occurred shortly after 6 p. m. (1 p. m., Eastern standard time) as he apparently was recovering from a slight attack of lumbago which had forced him to forego social engagements the past few days. He had been confined to his bed for a few days, but his condition was considered better today. He had left his bed and descended into his library where a heart seizure rendered him unconscious. He died within a few minutes.

His widow, the former Ivy Muriel Dundas, and three children survive.



SIR AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN.

The death of the statesman, bitter foe of Nazi Germany, which tore up what he called his "greatest, dearest handiwork"—the Locarno Treaty of 1925— plunged into sorrow the members of the House of Commons who knew the monocled, dapper Sir Austen as an idealistic political fighter for peace, party and country.

Veterans Battle For and Against Neutrality Bill

Minnesotan Calls Act Aid to Fascism; Hero Sees Peace in Measure.

Neutrality Bill War.

Two World War veterans, Representatives Bernard, of Minnesota, and Izak, of California, took opposite views of McReynolds neutrality bill as House closed general debate on the bill.

The Spanish Embassy in Washington urged American neutrality embargoes be invoked against Italy because that country "is waging an undeclared war" against the Loyalist government. Spanish Loyalist airplanes, in a counterattack against the heavy insurgent offensive aimed at Madrid, bombed rebel concentration points outside the capital.

Pleas in Congress.

By Sidney Olson.

Two American veterans of the great war, now Representatives, strode to the well of the House yesterday, both pleading the cause of peace—and one argued for the McReynolds neutrality bill, while the other attacked it bitterly as "pro-Fascist."

John Toussaint Bernard, Farmer-Labor, of Minnesota, Corsican-born iron miner who reads Rousseau and the French poets, and who spent 15 months in the trenches in France as an American soldier, shouted to a silent House:

"The McReynolds bill, even more than the Pittman neutrality bill, invites Fascist aggression against peaceful countries, against nations friendly to the American and other democratic governments.

"Under such so-called neutrality

Goering Urges Guard to Foil Hitler Murder

Warns Foes May Seek to 'Overpower Germany' by Assassinations.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 16.—Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering called upon the German people today to weld an "impenetrable ring" around Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler in a sudden warning against those who might seek to "overpower Germany by murder and cowardly assassinations."

"Woe to him who there plays with fire," Germany's No. 2 man, Prime Minister of Prussia, declared in a Rearmament Day speech which left the interpretation in some quarters that a possible attempt on the lives of leading personalities had come to the attention of the government. This was officially denied.

The ministry of propaganda said the phrase "murder and cowardly assassination" was an "emotional outburst against Communists and that it had no special significance.

The German press, silent on Goering's reference, adopted a similar attitude on the latest repercussion of the "LaGuardia incident" after an early edition of Der Angriff demanded intervention by President Roosevelt because of "insults" to Germany. The demand was withdrawn from later editions.

Goering, in a 17-minute radio speech in commemoration of the second anniversary of Hitler's reintroduction of conscription in renunciation of a provision of the treaty of Versailles, said:

"Let all those who believe, perhaps as a last resort, that they can overpower Germany by murder or cowardly assassinations be told that in such case too ardent love of the whole people will form a most secure wall around the Fuehrer and his trusted followers."

Rail Pension Pact Reached After Parley

Two Congressional Acts Are Required to Make Plan Effective.

1,500,000 Affected; to Be Administered by Retirement Board.

By William V. Nessly.

Ending the protracted controversy over a Federal railroad retirement system, representatives of the Nation's railroads and of the 21 standard railroad labor unions last night reached a complete agreement on new legislation to provide pensions for 1,500,000 railroad workers.

George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association, and J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, as heads of the two groups of negotiators, announced the agreement, which calls for two new acts.

One of the new laws will amend the present one providing for pensions and setting up the Railroad Retirement Board; the other will be a substitute for the tax act providing funds for the pensions. Enforcement of the latter has been enjoined in litigation brought by the carriers and now in the Circuit Court of Appeals here.

Negotiations which brought the new agreement were begun on January 7 at request of President Roosevelt, who asked that efforts be made to agree on changes in the tax act that was to expire on February 28. No agreement was reached by that date and Congress extended its provisions to June 30, 1938.

Tax on Pay Rolls.

Principal provisions of the plan agreed to are:

A total tax of 5 per cent of the pay roll, instead of the present 7 per cent, one-half to be paid by the roads and half by the employes. The tax applies only on the first $300 of any employe's pay in one month. The tax increases gradually to 7 per cent after 12 years.

The tax will be paid into the pensions out of the Federal Treasury.

The plan is to be administered by the railroad retirement board, as at present, and the method of computing an annuity is the same as in the existing law.

An employe is eligible to retire voluntarily at the age of 65 years, but may retire at 60 after 30 years of service, with a reduction in the annuity at the rate of one-fifteenth for each year he is under 65. There is no compulsory retirement age, but an employe who works after he is 65 will not receive credit for service after that age. Employes may retire because of physical or mental disability after 30 years of service, with full annuity rights.

Present private pension rolls of the railroads are taken into the Federal system, but in cases where retired employes are receiving more money than they would under the Federal system, which places a limit of $120 a month, the railroads agree to pay the difference.

Limit on Applications.

No pension will be paid to an employe who retires and engages in "regular gainful employment" in some other line of work.

The plan applies to employes of railroads, express companies, sleeping car companies, and their subsidiaries, as well as to employes of railroad associations and railroad labor organizations.

The amount of an annuity is to be determined, as at present, by multiplying the years of service by a percentage of the monthly wage up to $300. The percentage of the compensation is 2 per cent on the first $50; 1½ pre cent on the next $100, and 1 per cent on all sums up to the $300 maximum.

A minimum annuity for persons with at least 20 years of service is provided, but the annuity will not be less than the old-age benefit that the eployee would receive under the Social Security Act.

An employe may, if he elects, receive a portion of his annuity, with the remainder purchasing an annuity for his wife she survives him. Death benefits are provided,

'Good Sportsmanship' Asked By McReynolds, Ending Court Silence on Proposed Changes

Green Declares Labor Favors President's Proposal.

New Blood Needed, He Tells Senators

Foes of Plan Apologetic During Questioning of Union Head.

By Robert C. Albright.

Florid of face but mild of speech, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor yesterday told the Senate Judiciary Committee that labor is willing to "take its chances" with the President's judiciary program.

Green urged a court "costantly re-made and re-constructed with men who come from close association with their fellow men." He said new justices were needed "familiar with the facts and realities of life."

Court plan opponents were gentle in questioning Green, or said they were. One impressed on the labor leader he was "just trying to be friendly." Another explained he was talking loudly not because he was "mad," but because he wanted to be heard. Still another made clear he was not "badgering."

But they pulled no punches when Justin Miller, Board of Tax Appeals member, followed Green on the stand with a chart showing "correlation" between the ages of justices and and invalidating opinions. Opponents charged Miller with leaving "other factors" out of his chart, and even some of the court plan proponents joined in the rebuke.

Age Relation Charted.

Miller, president of the Federal Bar Association and a former law school dean, charted a gradual increase in the average ages of Supreme Court justices, from 51 in the early days of the Republic to a peak of 72 at the present time. He said his chart showed a relationship between advanced age of court members and the increase in invalidating opinions.

It was the fifth day of Administration testimony for the President's Court plan. Today Prof. Edwin S. Corwin, of Princeton, author of "Twilight of the Supreme Court," and Dean Leon Green, of Nrthwestern University law schol, will take the stand. The opposition will not open its case until Monday.

The radio attack on the court program continued last night with a speech by Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia. Holt charged the President's sole object is "power, power and more power." He said the President had "retreated" from his original claim of crowded dockets after "a terrific bombardment from all sides."

Activities of the Democratic National Committee in behalf of the Court plan were questioned by Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska; at conclusion of yesterday's hearings. Burke said he was advised the "public information committee," publishing daily statements on the court program, was an "adjunct of the Democratic National Committee.

First labor witness to face the committee, Green protested a "reverential regard" for the Supreme Court. He said the A. F. of L. "has never in the past nor will it now approach the problem on the basis that the Supreme Court has assumed dictatorial power or that its members have not the mental capacity or the necessary learning."

Green further said the A. F. of L. "will never stand" for any new justice "whose basis for appointment is a predetermination on his part on any specific program." What labor wants, he insisted repeatedly, is a court "in touch with the facts and realities."

Senator William H. Dieterich, Illinois Democrat, asked if the work of the justices didn't justify an enlargement of the bench.

"I don't understand there is any complaint about the justices being able to transact their business," replied Green. "I think that the point

Japan Creates Of Mongokuo Puppet State

China Alarmed as Tokyo Extends Mailed Fist Beyond Manchukuo.

By the Associated Press.

Kalgan, Chahar Province, China, March 16.—Establishment of a new Japanese-dominated state, Mongokuo, modeled after adjoining Manchukuo, was reported today from the snowy wastes of northern Chahar.

Rebellious Prince Teh Wang has set up a new nation, with the aid of Japanese military advisers, unconfirmed reports said, precipitating threats of new war between Japan and China.

Alleged establishment of a new puppet state, wedged between Manchukuo and Suiyan Province and extending to within 20 miles of Kalgan, might bring a new crisis in Suiyan, where Japanese penetration was halted decisively late last year.

Kalgan was shocked by the Chahar reports, carried by missionaries from northern Chahar. War dangers previously had been believed lessened by withdrawals of Japanese militarists.

Prince Teh long had opposed the Nanking government, but his submission to Japanese influence, alleged by Chinese to include extensive war supplies and funds, was said to have cost him the support of his people.

The northern Chahar advices declared Prince Teh had formed a government, drawn up tariff schedules, and started an administrative system with the aid of 100 assistants. Collection of customs duties already has started, the reports said.

Detroit Strikes In Four Hotels End After Riot

Murphy Reports Hostelries Will Reopen; Shot Fired in Clash.

By the Associated Press.

Quick settlement of strikes resulted in the reopening of four big Detroit hotels last night.

Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan, who intervened after the Book-Cadillac, Detroit-Leland, Fort Shelby and Statler hotels had been temporarily closed to new patrons, announced termination of the short stalemate.

Police guards had been posted earlier after a shot was fired in a scrimmage at the Book-Cadillac. They reported 30 men, led by a waiters and waitresses' union organizer, forced their way into the hostelry by overpowering two patrolmen and a hotel guard whose pistol was discharged into the floor during the tussle. The object of the invasion was organization of a "sit-down" strike.

Meanwhile, 5,000 strikers held eight big Chrysler Motor Corporation plants in Detroit for the ninth day. Under the terms of a Circuit Court injunction they must leave the property by 9 a. m. today. The squatters gave no indication of their plans.

The Chrysler strike, stemming from the United Automobile Workers Union's demand for recognition as sole bargaining agency for the firm's employes, affected 60,000 workers. More than 10,000 were idle at the Hudson Motor Car Co. in Detroit and 2,200 at the Reo Motor Car Co. at Lansing, Mich.

At Chicago, 140 dress factory employes walked out in what International Ladies Garment Workers Union officials termed the "first skirmish" in a threatened general strike of 40,000 cotton goods needle workers in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and Wisconsin.

A dozen other labor controversies kept almost 7,000 Chicagoans away from their jobs. Police were de-

Long Precedent Broken As Justice Assails Roosevelt Plan.

Life Not Always Pleasant, He says

Supreme Bench Called 'Balance Wheel' of Democracy.

Speaking directly against the President's court proposal, Justice James C. McReynolds last night broke precedent which has stood since Reconstruction days when he said that good sportsmanship demands that the loser in a judicial dispute should be a good loser.

The 75-year-old justice, away from the marble of the Capitol Hill court building and out of his robes and vesture as a justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, became the first of the nine members of the court to answer President Roosevelt's demand for change and the first in more than half a century to talk about the court off the bench.

Court "Balance Wheel."

The justice, conservative member of the Court and said by observers to be one of those whom the President wishes to counteract by his plan, said that good sportsmanship demands that when a person "has presented his case to a fair tribunal and lost, he should be a good sport and say, 'This is my country.'"

The Supreme Court of the United States, said Justice McReynolds, is "like the balance wheel of a watch. Take it out and the works will not function." He added, "the courts decided only the things that are submitted to them."

Justice McReynolds spoke at the eighty-eighth annual Founders' day banquet of the fraternity, he was initiated into 55 years ago at Vanderbilt University, Phi Delta Theta, at the Carlton Hotel. Less than a hundred persons heard him speak in defense of the court upon which he has served since 1914.

Disclaims "Derelicts."

Evidently referring ot incompetent members of the Federal judiciary at which President Roosevelt claims to have aimed his plan for change, Justice McReynolds said:

"The courts are not responsible for those derelicts. The Constitution delegated that power to another."

Also Justice McReynolds indicated that the life of a judge, the enforced austerity, is not all that a man young or old would want from living. Said he:

"To be a judge is not agreeable work in many ways."

Justice McReynolds began his talk to members of his fraternity by saying:

"We're in a troublesome world—a strange common unrest—a strange disposition to forget that great injunction to prove all things."

"Willful Opportunism."

"There is a strange restlessness," he said, "a strange desire to break away from that which is proved—to rule or ruin.

"It is difficult to understand this willful opportunism."

The justice said that he had tried always not to forget the oath taken by all officers of the United States to support the Constitution.

Then the aged justice said that in his years on the bench he has tried to protect "the poorest darky in the Georgia backwoods as well as the man in the mansion of Fifth avenue, and I have the same obligation to the man in the mansion on Fifth avenue as to the humblest man in any walk of life."

Constitution a Success.

The justice told his listeners that there is a great desire by the American people that their Government shall not go to pieces and that "we shall come together and answer to the applause of all right-thinking men."

Speaking of the Constitution and ideals of the founders, McReynolds said: "It has succeeded beyond expectations of the fathers. We have seen rights to life, liberty and property preserved."

The American people, he said, have determined that our success in history to this day shall not be thrown to the winds.

"Every man in public life has a

Safety Patrol Finds Motorists Awakening to Driving Dangers

By Howard F. Wentworth.

(Winner of first prize in the Nation-wide C. I. T. Safety Contest with his 1936 series appearing in The Post.)

With few exceptions, Washington motorists yesterday exhibited a sudden awakening to the dangers of highway recklessness.

During the second day of its cruising search for open infractions of the law, the new safety patrol, with Traffic Policeman George M. Patton again in the observer's seat, witnessed a change in driving practices. Major violations and careless motoring were in the minority.

During the afternoon tour of principal traffic centers throughout the city, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer rode in the patrol car. He was impressed with the apparent uptrend in safe driving and expressed encouragement at results of the present drive to reduce accidents.

Apparently recognizing the safety car and its occupants, several motorists drew abreast to offer congratulations and urge the patrol to "keep up the good work."

Minor infractions were noticeable and in several instances the patrol encountered flagrant violating of safety rules. The average driver, however, showed a willingness to obey the regulations.

An automobile dealer—officer in a large midtown sales concern—was overtaken on Connecticut avenue near McKinley street northwest after a high-speed chase of nearly a mile.

"I've never been stopped before—and I've been driving along here for 20 years," the accused motorist told Policeman Patton.

Traffic along the avenue—especially at intersections—was heavy. The driver of the speeding car was paced at 40 miles an hour from Albemarle street.

He questioned accuracy of the patrol car's speedometer, contending he constantly watched the register on his own auto and "didn't travel more than 20 or 25 miles an hour."

Policeman Patton ordered the driver to appear in court tomorrow.

Admiral Hobson, Spanish War Naval Hero, Dies of Heart Attack in New York at 66

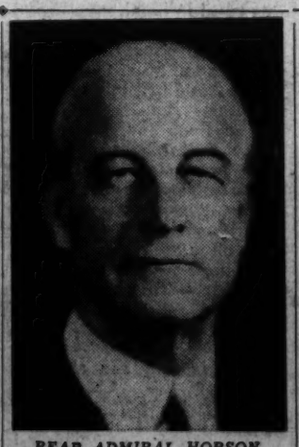
Rear Admiral Richmond Pearson Hobson, Spanish War naval hero of Merrimac fame and fierce campaigner against liquor and drugs in his later years, died suddenly of a heart attack in New York yesterday. He was 66.

Preparing to leave his home for his Lexington avenue office, Admiral Hobson had donned his hat and coat when he was stricken.

A former member of Congress from Alabama, his native State, and a frequent witness at committee hearings on matters pertaining to the drug and liquor traffic, his tall, military figure was well known to Washingtonians.

But the admiral's fame rested not on the many books he wrote, his advocacy of worldwide peace or the fact that he was the first to introduce in Congress a prohibition amendment to the Constitution. It was the celebrated incident of June 3, 1898, that made his name a household word, gave American schoolboys a new hero to worship and, 35 years later, resulted in his being awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Nine years out of Annapolis,



REAR ADMIRAL HOBSON.

young Hobson was given the responsibility of sinking the collier Merrimac in the narrow entrance to the harbor of Santiago de Cuba to bottle up Admiral Cervera and his Spanish fleet.

Early in the morning of June 3, Hobson took over the collier and with a crew of six—a seventh seaman who had stowed away in the vessel reported for duty when she was under way—sailed forth on the dangerous errand. Under heavy fire from the Spanish fleet and shore batteries, the Merrimac reached the desired position in the channel.

The skipper of this "suicide squadron" had planned to sink the vessel exactly crosswise at the harbor entrance. But with the rudder shot away, it was impossible to swing the craft about.

With submarine mines and torpedoes exploding around the Merrimac, its skipper fired her explosives and gave the command to abandon ship. He and his seven volunteers were prevented by a strong tide from getting into their

Steel Deadlock Ended as Firms Offer Navy Bids

13 Concerns Seek U. S. Contracts After Delay on 40-Hour Week.

The steel bid deadlock that has deprived the Navy Department of steel for its current building program was broken definitely yesterday when 13 steel companies submitted proposals on various portions of the 25,000,000 pounds sought.

Absence of bids previously had been attributed to requirements of the Walsh-Healey act, chiefly the provision for maintenance of the 40-hour week on Government contracts. Manufacturing concerns insisted they could not upset their production schedules by observing the limited hours prescribed for the relatively small lots of their products needed by the Navy. In the protracted controversy that ensued, suggestions were even made that the protracted controversy that ensued, suggestions were even made that the Government manufacture its own steel.

Recent action of Carnegie-Illinois, Bethlehem and other steel makers, however, in adopting the 40-hour week, with pay increases, cleared the way for submitting of bids on Government work.

Steel Bids Opened.

Bids were opened at the Navy's Bureau of Supplies and Accounts yesterday from the following steel concerns:

Carnegie - Illinois, Washington; Bethlehem, Bethlehem, Pa.; Enterprise Galvanizing Co., Philadelphia; Joseph P. Cattie, Inc., Philadelphia; Ross Galvanizing Works, Brooklyn; Penn Galvanizing Co., Philadelphia; Alan Wood Steel Co., Conshohocken, Pa.; Jones & Laughlin, Pittsburgh; Phoenix Iron Co., Philadelphia; Lukens Steel Co., Coatesville, a.; Bethlehem Steel, San Francisco; Central Iron & Steel, Harrisonburg, Pa., and Worth Steel, Claymont, Del.

The Navy Department announced all of the bids agreed to comply with the stipulations of the Walsh-Healey law.

Detailed analysis of the proposals will require some days, officials said, but information regarding amounts and prices will be tabulated and evaluated, then made public. The Navy advertised for 12 separate lots of various types of steel. Bids received last year were rejected as excessive in price.

Meanwhile, in another labor development, President Roosevelt, at Warm Springs, Ga., yesterday signed a joint resolution which will enable the Government to share in the expense of the International Labor Office incident to holding its tripartite technical textile conference here, beginning April 2.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, in an address last night at Northampton, Mass., said that at the conference Government officials, workers and employers will spend two weeks discussing economic conditions facing the textile industry and factors that stand in the way of improving working conditions. They will thresh out the possibilities, she said, of international action "to put the world textile industry in a position where it can yield to its owners a reasonable profit and at the same time give its workers earnings which will make it possible for them to maintain a standard of living which fits into our conception of what a family in these modern times is entitled to."

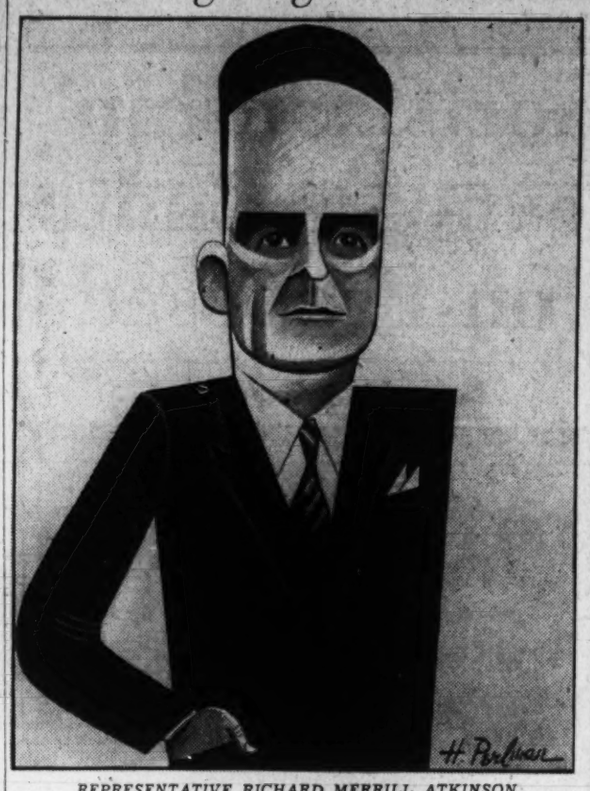
New Faces In Congress

Atkinson Comes to Congress With Fighting Marine Career



REPRESENTATIVE RICHARD MERRILL ATKINSON.

Devil Dog, Who Captured Byrns' Seat by 13 Votes, Hopes to Incorporate Cumberland River in TVA Power Program.

By Liam Lenihan.

Political heir to Tennessee's fifth district, bailiwick of the late Speaker Byrns, is a 43-year-old former Marine, Richard Merrill Atkinson, of Nashville.

The stocky, brown-eyed freshmen Congressmen who squeezed through to victory with a margin of 13 votes, ran stubby hands through graying-dark hair, cut military fashion, here yesterday, while he talked lazily in a Southern drawl.

"One of my main interests in Congress is to get the Cumberland River incorporated in the TVA program of power development and flood control," he said.

Atkinson was born in Nashville, educated in the public schools, took his B. S. from Vanderbilt University, then decided to study law. He had just rounded out his legal studies at Cumberland when America declared war on Germany, so in June, 1917, he enlisted.

Transferred from the Navy to the Forty-seventh Co., United States Marines, Atkinson saw active service overseas and was demobilized with the rank of captain in 1919.

Home from the battlefields, the seasoned veteran practiced law, but his able management of Tyson's campaign for him in politics decided a future for him in politics.

Thus in 1925 he was appointed attorney general for the Tenth Judicial District, took office the following year and served until September, 1934. He went back to his legal practice then until he contested the Fifth District.

Representative Atkinson represents an agricultural district as a whole, thus he is interested in the development of rural communities and in the farm tenancy program. "Farms should be made just as attractive as urban dwellings," he holds. "The overpopulation of our cities is due to the plight of our farms."

Revealing that the swollen waters of the Cumberland River reached the 65-foot level during the recent flood, Atkinson said that untold damage wreaked by the raging torrent could have been averted if there had been the proper system of control.

Here to back the Democratic platform and the basic principles of the New Deal, the Tennessean admitted to "a deep interest in people," and in the "great humanitarian program" of the President.

Boy Dies After Scuffle In Corridor of School

Alton, Ill., March 16 (AP).—Leroy Asalone, 14-year-old junior high school student, died today after a scuffle with a classmate, John Lefler, 13, as they were passing to classrooms.

"He hit me first and I hit him back," the Lefler boy told the Madison County coroner. The Asalone boy fell to the floor. Other students and members of the faculty tried to revive him, but he was pronounced dead when a physician arrived.

Monks Win Sit-Down.

Cairo, Egypt, March 16 (AP).—The victory of Coptic monks who staged a 40-day stay-in strike at their Assiut Desert monastery was completed today with resignation of their abbot, Komnos Sidarus. The Coptic patriarch, Yohannes, accepted the resignation, which the monks had sought by refusal to budge from their walled, windowless retreat.

$10 for Hopeless Bills.

St. Paul, March 16 (AP).—The flow of legislation in Minnesota might be curbed if a bill introduced today in the State Senate becomes a law. It would provide that lawmakers be assessed $10 for each bill introduced without any hope of passage.

Income Taxes Believed Short Of Estimates

Unbalanced Budget for '38 Indicated; Congress Cold to Eccles Proposal.

By Franklyn Waltman.

As the collectors of internal revenue and their assistants counted the deluge of income payments made Monday in an effort to determine the total, Capitol Hill yesterday gave a decidedly cold reception to the suggestion that Federal income taxes be increased in order to bring about a balanced budget, projected by Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System.

A preliminary report on income-tax collections this month, made by Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering, indicated the Treasury may not reach its estimated income-tax collection of $840,000,000 for the first quarter of this calendar year. Preliminary figures showed returns this year were running approximately 35 per cent ahead of last year. The estimate, however, is 66 per cent over the 1936 collections.

May Unbalance '38 Budget.

Whether the Treasury reaches its income tax goal in this quarter will not be known definitely, however, until later this week. Due to the changes in the income tax laws last year, particularly the provisions subjecting corporation dividends to the normal tax and those relating to undistributed corporation profits, it was held that past experience was not a good criterion and that it was unsafe to make guesses until more returns have been tabulated.

But if the payments fall short in substantial measure of the estimate for this quarter, it means they will fall short also in the next three quarters of the calendar year and thus will invalidate the President's revenue estimates both for the current fiscal year as well as that which commences July 1 next. A failure to reach the estimated income totals in the next fiscal year would make impossible the balanced budget promised by the President for that period.

Promise Was Qualified.

Even if the President's revenue estimates for the next fiscal year are fulfilled, the prospect for a balanced budget remains somewhat dark. Mr. Roosevelt in January held out the promise of a balanced budget for the next fiscal year only if relief expenditures in that period could be held not to exceed $1,537,000,000 and if his budgetary expenditures were not otherwise increased.

Mr. Roosevelt has not yet recommended a relief appropriation for the next fiscal year. Before leaving for Warm Springs a week ago he said he would go to work on that problem after his return to Washington March 25. But there is some question whether the relief appropriation can be held down to the $1,537,000,000 figure. In addition, demands for flood control appropriations for the Ohio Valley may add to the other expenditures of the Treasury in the fiscal year.

Indeed, in some quarters Eccles' declaration for increasing Federal income taxes in order to bring about a balanced budget was regarded as a White House trial balloon to test public reaction and also to prepare the country for a subsequent Presidential message recommending higher taxes. Eccles conferred with the President before his departure for the South last week.

Campaign Promise Cited.

In the matter of increasing income taxes, the President is confronted by his own declaration during the last campaign, as well as that of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, that no further tax increases were necessary. Thus, if the President proposes an increase in Federal tax rates he will be breaking another campaign promise. But it will be justified, as were other broken campaign promises, on the ground that such action has been made necessary by unforeseen events.

This is clearly indicated in the Eccles statement. The Federal Reserve chieftain used the present situation resulting from increasing price levels as a springboard for his proposal that the budget be balanced by increased taxes. The thesis he projected was that "only" by balancing the budget—through increased taxes, if necessary—"can monetary inflation be prevented." He turned his back on any tightening of money rates as a brake on inflationary price movements.

Another slump in United States Government security prices yesterday added to the gravity of the situation from the Treasury's viewpoint and indicated that, despite Eccles, money rates were undergoing a slight hardening process.

The Associated Press from New York reported that Government bonds, pushed by hevay selling, tumbled on the stock exchange and that at least one issue fell for a time below par for the first time since August, 1935. This issue was the Treasury 2½ per cent loan of 1949-53, floated last December. Quotations for $1,000 units of that security dropped to $999.70, later closing at $1,000 but with a net loss of $4.55 for the day.

Other Government issues pnder pressure were the HOLC 3 per cents of 1952, which slipped $8.45 to finish at $1,028, and the Treasury 3⅜ per cents of 1943-47, which at $1,061.60 showed a decline of $7.12 for the day. The decline in prices yesterday carried a number of Government issues to new lows for the year, the Associated Press reported. Transactions in Governments totaled $7,290,000, face value, for the day.

Corporate Bonds Hit.

Corporate bonds were widely affected by the slump in Governments, and losses up to $8.30 per $1,000 face value were recorded. The Associated Press average of 10 bonds of this class fell 10 cents per $100 bond to 110.1, a new low for 1936-37.

The Associated Press further reported that as evidence of the hardening of money rates, dealers pointed out the rate on Federal funds was increased Monday to one-quarter of 1 per cent from one-eighth of 1 per cent, the first rise since February, 1934. Other short-term paper has been boosted similarly in the last two months.

In view of these developments the Federal income-tax collections this month rave taken on added significance. The only figures available indicating the size of the March 15 payments came in the form of the sums deposited on account of income-tax payments by collectors of internal revenue throughout March up to Monday. These figures did not include returns which were received in the mails late Monday and yesterday.

Collections Over 1936.

Commissioner Helvering reported that $381,512,457.12 in income taxes had been reported collected and deposited from March 1 to March 15, inclusive, compared with $281,758,032.44 from March 1 to March 16, 1936, the comparable period last year. This was an increase of about 35 per cent.

Including the $381,512,000 figure reported for March by Commissioner Helvering, the Treasury has received from income-tax payments a total of $490,512,000 this year, compared with $360,169,000 in the corresponding period last year. The Treasury in the first three months of 1936 received $490,864,000 from income taxes. Thus it already has in hand substantially the same amount it collected in the entire first quarter of last year.

But in order to reach the Treasury's estimate of $840,000,000 it is necessary that approximately $350,000,000 more in income taxes be received this year than have so far been officially tabulated. In the period last year between the preliminary report and the end of March the income tax figure was increased about $130,000,000. If the estimate is to be reached this year the figure will have to be increased more than 150 per cent, whereas the collections for the preliminary period showed an increase of but 35 per cent.

Treadway Hits Eccles Plan.

As for increasing the present rates of taxation, as suggested by Eccles, not even the Democratic leaders on Capitol Hill showed any enthusiasm for the proposal. Speaker Bankhead drily remarked that he was "not flushed with enthusiasm" for the plan, while Senate Democratic Leader Robinson said: "Let's go slow about increasing taxes."

Representative Allen T. Treadway, ranking Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, asserted that "it would be confiscation of the people's property, in view of the Administration's extravagance, to think of balancing the budget through higher taxes."

Sty on Left Eye Is Ignored By Roosevelt in Reading Mail

Aides Little Worried by Affliction; Chill Weather Keeps President Indoors in South.

By the Associated Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., March 15.—President Roosevelt was reported by aides today to be treating a sty on his left eye. They said it was of little consequence and was not interfering with his reading of the daily mail from Washington.

A bright sun failed to bring the temperature above 50 and kept the President close to his temporary home again, disappointing small groups anticipating a Presidential visit.

Officials blamed the chilly atmosphere for the second abandonment of plans to motor to nearby rural settlement and Civilian Conservation Corps projects.

Except for a brief drive in the afternoon, the President remained in seclusion. He completed a message he will telephone tomorrow night to the Charitable Irish Society of Boston, which is celebrating its 200th aniversary.

A request that the message be relayed to the Savannah, Ga., Hibernian Society, which will be giving a dinner at the same time, was taken under advisement.

Without the usual family dinner and reunion with his mother and old friends at the White House in Washington, the President will observe his thirty-second wedding anniversary tomorrow. No plans were made for a celebration.

Clippers May Race With Miss Earhart

Oakland, Calif., March 16 (AP).—An unintended air "race" across the Pacific may start tomorrow with Amelia Earhart on her world flight, the Pan American Clipper on a pioneering hop to New Zealand and the Hawaii Clipper heading for Manila.

Miss Earhart said she would take off then regardless of the flights of the other two big planes.

Pan American said its Hawaii Clipper would leave at 3 p. m. tomorrow and that its pioneering plane probably would get away for a 7,000-mile trip to Auckland, New Zealand, during the day.

Va. Legislator Charges Delay In Redistricting

Population Centers Ignore Lynchburg City Delegate Charges in Complaint.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 16.—Franklin Daniel, member of the House of Delegates from Lynchburg, charged today State constitutional provisions for redistricting had been ignored despite the fact that bills for reapportionment had been offered in the General Assembly.

These bills, he said, were "passed by in committee or defeated by the votes of those who did not desire for one reason or another to see a more equitable basis established."

He said Isle of Wight County, with a population of 13,409, and Roanoke County, with a population of 35,289, each had one member in the House, and that Pittsylvania, with a population of 61,424, had but two members, or one for slightly less than a population of 31,000.

Unfair Ratios Noted.

"The City of Roanoke, with a population of almost 70,000, has only two members in the House," he said. "Richmond, with a population of 182,929, has only six, while Lynchburg, with a population of 40,661, has only one member.

"Comparisons of these figures are interesting. It will be worthwhile to the citizens to ponder the equity of a basis of representation where Isle of Wight County, with a population of 13,409, has one member in the House, while the City of Lynchburg, with a population of 40,661, has only one member.

"It will be interesting to observe also that Roanoke County, with a population of almost three times that of Isle of Wight, has the same representation in the House.

Population as Representation.

"It will be quite enlightening to note that while the City of Richmond, with a population of 182,929, has only six members in the House, the counties of Charlotte, Dinwiddie, Giles, Bland, Goochland, Fluvanna, Isle of Wight, Lancaster, Richmond, Louisa, Lunenburg, Nelson, Patrick, Princess Anne, Spotsylvania and the City of Fredericksburg, with a total population of 191,646, have 12 members in the House."

Daniel gave other examples which he said were "rather astounding" illustrations of inequalities in representation.

Colored Illiterate Forges 16 Notes; Is Given 8 Years

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., March 16.—Walter Haskins, colored, who can barely write his own name, was in jail today awaiting removal to the State Penitentiary to serve eight years for forging 16 notes in two small local banks.

Haskins used the names of two Southern Railway engineers, W. L. Seay and J. W. Clark, on the notes ranging from $10 to $200. The money was loaned, the notes were curtailed and renewed and the two railway men never knew, they said, that their names were being forged. Haskins let one note lapse and when Clark was called as indirser the deception came to light. Haskins was indicted on some of the notes he had completely paid up but the originals of which were found in his cabin.

Marketing Accord Legislation Sought

By the Associated Press.

The Agriculture Adjustment Administration asked Congress yesterday to re-enact the marketing agreement provisions of the invalidated agricultural adjustment act.

J. W. Tapp, assistant AAA administrator, told a House Agriculture sub-committee a Federal District Court at Boston had held the Government lacked authority to sponsor milk or fruit and vegetable marketing agreements to guarantee producers parity prices.

The court held, he explained, that the Supreme Court's action holding the AAA act unconstitutional threw out the marketing agreement provisions contained in an amendment to the act.

Re-enactment of the provisions of the amendment would settle the question, he said.

Child, Alone in House, Drinks Poison and Dies

Westminster, Md., March 16 (AP).—The death of the young son of Mr. and Mrs. William Dayhoof, near Pleasant Valley, was described today by Carrol County authorities as accidental.

The child, Geary, who would have been 2 years old in May, was left alone in the house yesterday, his father said, while he went to the barn to do some chores. His mother also was away. The boy had been ill with mumps.

Faces Murder Charges

Jonesville, Va., March 16.—Sheriff R. F. Giles returned here today with an 82-year-old man he said had admitted he was Green Allen Brooks, who is charged in Lee County, Va., with the slaying of two officers in 1935. The prisoner (shown above) was arrested in Lubbock, Tex. after a two-year search.

Broderick Heads Open-Market Unit

Joseph A. Broderick has been elected chairman of the new executive committee of the Federal Reserve System's open-market committee. Others chosen were John K. McKee, who, like Broderick, is a member of the Board of Governors of the reserve system; George L. Harrison, president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, and J. S. Sinclair, president of the Philadelphia Reserve Bank.

While last Friday's flurry of selling of Government bonds presumably was discussed by the open market committee, no announcement touching on the subject was forthcoming. No action had been anticipated.

The open market body has charge of the reserve's activities in the purchase and sale of Government obligations, and it has been forecast that it would buy Federal obligations in case any sharp break should occur.

U. S. Saves $70,000,000 On WPA Compensation

New York, March 16 (AP).—Compensation and care for injured WPA workers have cost the Federal Government $10,000,000, about $70,000,000 less than private insurance would have requqired, W. O. Wheary, Federal director of safety for the WPA, disclosed today.

The calculations were announced at the concluding session of a two-day conference of regional and State safety engineers from 12 Northeastern States and the District of Columbia.

Mystery Death Of Mrs. Cable Involves 6 Men

Friends Are Investigated as 'Other Woman' Denies Guilt.

By the Associated Press.

Canton, Ohio, March 16.—Investigation into the shotgun slaying of Rose Beiter Cable struck into the homes of a half-dozen prominent men in northeastern Ohio today at the same time Miss Theresa Ludwig, 48-year-old friend of the slain woman's husband, was stoutly affirming her innocence.

"We expect to call in four men at least for questioning," Mayor James Seccombe said coincident with an announcement he would pay $1,000 for a conviction in Mrs. Cable's death.

None of the names of the men involved was announced, but authorities said they had evidence indicating the men had used as "a community gathering place" the apartment which the bereaved husband, Dueber S. Cable, told police he maintained in Akron for Miss Ludwig.

Hostess at "Party Hangout."

Capt. Elmer E. Clark declared Miss Ludwig—stout, bespectacled "six others besides Cable used the apartment as a party hangout," and that she acted as a hostess part of the time for Cable's friends.

"I haven't anything to worry about," Miss Ludwig informed a Cleveland News reporter who interviewed the former dress shop proprietor at her brother's behest.

"I know I'm in a bad spot, but I'm sure everything is going to come out all right."

She expressed belief the man to be arrested was the owner of a motor car which several times circled the Fulton road home of the Cables before the mother of two children plunged to the floor fatally wounded by birdshot which came through a window pane.

Two girls had identified a motor car as one which they saw near the house, and the description approached that if Miss Ludwig's coupe.

Tells of Third Degree.

Miss Ludwig talked of the case at the home of a detective. She was taken into custody Saturday night.

"They gave me the third degree all right," she recounted, "but they were kind about it—because they could see I was telling the truth."

A. C. L. Barthelmeh, county prosecutor, confirmed he had found no evidence implicating Miss Ludwig in the case, and announced no progress in the investigation. A ballistics expert was examining closely a shell whose charge may have killed the middle-aged wife of the 48-year-old Cable a contractor. The shell was found 5 miles from the Cable home Friday several hours after Mrs. Cable died.

Chloroform Death Charges Outlined

Charlottesville, Va., March 16 (AP). Commonwealth's Attorney W. O. Fife charged in a bill of particulars filed today in Albemarle Circuit Court that Dr. R. G. Miller, Charlottesville dentist, administered chloroform "with intent to cause the death" of 18-year-old Cleo Sprouse, whose body was found on the edge of the University of Virginia campus, March 2.

Dr. Miller, indicted last week by a special grand jury on charges of murder in connection with the girl's death, is being held in the Henrico Jail at Richmond, pending trial.

Threat of Civil War Swells Chinese Terror

Nanking (Wednesday), March 17 (U.P.).—A new threat of civil war today added to the horrors of thousands of persons suffering from famine in Ezechuan Province.

The provincial army—its income vanishing because of the crop failure and subsequent famine—started extensive "maneuvers" and sent emissaries to Nanking to demand "money of war."

Woman, Son Stabbed; Husband Is Sought

Chicago, March 16 (AP).—Mrs. Marie Uher, 58, and her son John, 37, were stabbed to death today in what police said apparently was a furious family quarrel. Police Sergt. Edward J. Hayes said a search was on for Mrs. Uher's husband, Frank, 60, whom witnesses reported they saw fleeing from the house.

Mrs. Kate O'Lear told police she met the elder Uher, a railroad watchman, when she returned from a grocery. His hands were bloody, she said, and he told her, "When I do a job I do it good."

Burdine died instantly yesterday when he fell from the third-floor window of his home at 1215 Fairmont street northwest. Dr. MacDonald said the elderly man apparently lost his balance while looking out of the window.

Court Program Assailed Here By McReynolds

'Good Sportsmanship' Is Urged as Precedent Is Broken.

troublesome degree to fulfill," he asserted.

Then Justice McReynolds turned toward Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, who has opposed the plan for change, seated beside him.

"Brother Connally," the justice said, "has followed the dictates of his own reason."

Then Justice McReynolds wanted to sit down. He said he wanted to talk, but it woud take too long.

But his audience, small though it was, would not permit him to stop. There was insistent applause and the justice acceded.

Government "Complicated."

"You have the most complicated Government since the beginning of time," he said. "It is a piece of machinery so difficult to operate that unless it can have the constant attention of upright and intelligent citizens, its continuation is not possible.

"To manage all its divergent interests and do it intelligently from Washington is impossible. The man who can do it has not been born."

Local interests, he added, must be adjusted.

To reconcile these difficulties, said the justice, there must be some agency.

Cites Citizen's Duty.

Then Justice McReynolds spoke of the duty of the citizens of the Republic. Said he:

"The citizen has enormous obligations. He needs to be reminded that no two men think exactly alike. We need to understand that all minor difficulties must be subordinated to the major purpose."

The citizen needs a constant awakening, he said, to his obligations as well as to his rights.

In reference to the Constitution, Justice McReynolds remarked that about half of it refers to Congress, about a third to the Chief Executive and only about a page to the Supreme Court.

It was then that he recited his own code, to do alike to rich and poor—to give equal justice to the Georgia backwoodsman and the man on Fifth avenue.

Denies Situation Is "Rosy."

After pausing briefly, McReynolds concluded his speech thus:

"I should like to be optimistic. I should like to tell you that the situation is rosy. I cannot. But I like to believe in the courage of the American people, and I hope the future may be written to provide the liberty that you and I have enjoyed all these years."

Senator Connally, who spoke briefly to the members of the fraternity, said:

"I have been more than compensated for getting off a red-hot stove to be here with you for an hour."

"Safeguarding" Liberty.

The Senator was referring, it was believed, to the pressure on Capitol Hill against his stand against the President. He spoke after Justice McReynolds.

The actual situation, said Connally, is a challenge to "safeguard our liberties and the stability of our democratic instrumentalities."

Justice McReynolds is an annual attendant at the banquet of his fraternity. He does not appear for the dinner, but comes when the tables have been cleared. He stood up and joined in the "yell" of the fraternity.

At previous banquets Justice McReynolds has not talked about current affairs, rather devoting his remarks toward the welfare of the fraternity.

There were several lawyers in the audience. They and the others urged him to continue his talk when it became evident that the status of the Supreme Court was his subject.

About 80 Washington alumni and undergraduates at the University of Maryland attended. Guests of honor were the Associate Justice and Senator Connally.

Judge Isaac R. Hitt, Police Court judge, and Houston Harper, hotel owner, were made members of the fraternity's Golden Legion for 50 years of membership. Former Judge William E. Lee, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was elected president, with former Representative Royal Johnson retiring from the position. Other speakers included Milo C. Summers, Commissioner I. M. Foster, of the Court of Claims; James McWilliams, radio entertainer from Virginia Beach, and Dr. James Alexander Lyon.

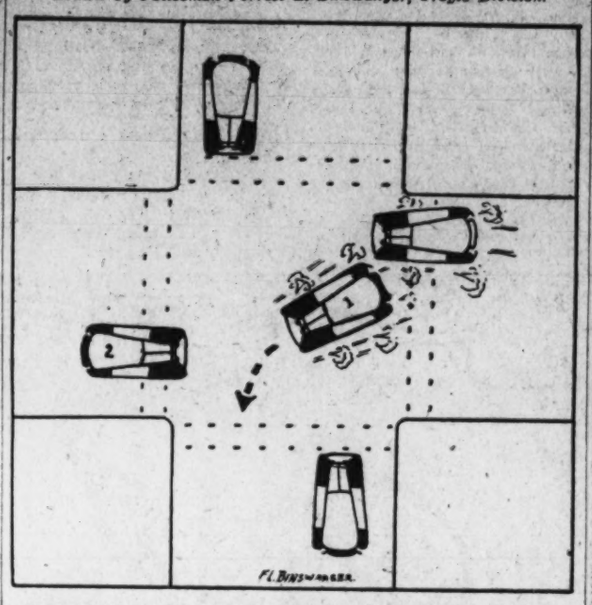
It is believed that Justice McReynolds' remarks are among the first made by a Supreme Court Justice about politics since days following the Civil War.

Then Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase, who succeeded Roger B. Taney as Chief Justice of the United States, made a speaking tour through the South appearing before the newly-freed colored people.

It was Chief Justice Chase who presided at the trial for impeachment of President Johnson, who was acquitted.

Today's Traffic Lesson

Drawn by Policeman Forrest L. Binswanger, Traffic Division.



Driver No. 2 has his car under control as he approaches the intersecton, yielding right-of-way to Car No. 1, who already is within the intersection and who has given a timely signal as required by law of his intent to make a left turn.

RIGHT-OF-WAY BETWEEN VEHICLES.
(Quoted from Traffic Regulations.)

"A vehicle approaching an intersection shall slow down and be kept under such control as to avoid colliding with pedestrian or vehicle.

"The driver within an intersection intending to turn to the left, shall yield to any vehicle approaching from the opposite direction which is within the intersection or so close thereto as to constitute an immediate hazard, but said driver having so yielded and having given a signal when and as required by law, may make such left turn and other vehicles approaching the intersection from said opposite direction shall yield to the driver making the turn."

allowing him to continue after issuing a "ticket."

As snow and slush disappeared from the streets, many drivers showed a tendency to "step on the gas." And on several occasions, motorists became overzealous in "jumping" red traffic signals and violating right-of-way rules.

A two-ton truck drove through a red light at Eighteenth street and Columbia road northwest. The driver was followed for several blocks and taken to the Second Police Precinct Station by Patton. He deposited collateral for the offense.

Runs Through Red Light.

And at the same intersection earlier in the day, police records show that the holder of a "low figure" license plate ran through another red light and failed to stop for a policeman's whistle. The car, it was reported, narrowly escaped crashing into another machine. A report of the incident was made to traffic authorities and the law violator will be asked to explain.

Cruising near Sixteenth and U streets northwest, the patrol encountered a Maryland auto traveling South at a high rate of speed. The driver passed a highway excavation without slowing down and with no regard for workmen or hazardous conditions. When stopped at Scott circle, the motorist explained:

"My speedometer is broken—I didn't realize I was going so fast."

The driver, who lives in Silver Spring, Md., admitted he was familiar with local traffic regulations, having worked in the Government for several years. He will appear in court.

Although driving conditions showed improvement, it was noted during yesterday's tour that pedestrians have failed to heed pleas for co-operation in safe walking.

Pedestrians Careless.

Intolerance appeared to be the keynote. Lives were endangered repeatedly as pedestrians stepped from the curb directly into the line of oncoming traffic. They appeared, in many instances, to have little regard for their own lives and no regard for regulations.

On Rhode Island avenue near First street northwest, the patrol car was forced to come to an abrupt stop in the center of the block to avoid striking a careless walker.

A timely warning, spoken with courtesy, only brought a sneer and guffaw from the heedless pedestrian.

Recent incidents of speeding while drivers listened to radios in their cars, yesterday brought comment from Traffic Court Judge John P. McMahon. Striking at motorists who plead to unwittingly violating speed laws during an "interesting" rdaio program, Judge McMahon said:

"Radios should be taken out of automobiles if people insist on listening to them instead of paying attention to their speed."

Liquor Board Demands Ban On Half Pints

Declares Small Bottles Are Causing Trouble in Beer Parlors.

In one of its most drastic recommendatons, the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday asked the Commissioners to outlaw the sale of liquor in half-pint bottles.

Possible far-reaching effects of the proposed new regulation were indicated by statistics of the A. B. C. Board, which revealed that of the 2,000,000 liquor packages sold in the District last October, 1,250,000 were half-pints. The proportion of sales are about the same throughout the year, the board reported.

Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, acting chairman of the A. B. C. Board, said the new regulation is desired to curb bootlegging and illicit public drinking. "The most trouble we are having in enforcing the regulations," Mrs. Mason said, "is caused by the half-pint bottles of liquor. We find that patrons of beer parlors where the sale of liquor is not allowed carry half-pint bottles into the establishments and drink them at the tables. This is a violatoin of the law.

"The present use of half-pint bottles also tends to encourage drinking in public places. I do not believe any large percentage of the public buys half-pint bottles of liquor to take home for home consumptoin.

"A person could not conveniently carry a full pint of whisky and the use of a full pint in a beer parlor could more easily be detected by the proprietor."

Mrs. Mason further pointed out to the Commissioners that a number of cities have outlawed the sale of half pints in an effort to prevent bootleegging after liquor stores are closed by law.

The proposed regulation would prohibit the sale of liquor in any container whose content is less than 12 ounces. The present minimum of 6½ ounces was established when the A. B. C. Board outlawed the sale of miniature "one drink" bottles of liquor after receiving complaints that high school students were obtaining them.

The Commissioners received the Board's recommendation at their semiweekly meeting, but refused to take action.

Blizzard in Dublin Buries Shamrocks

Dublin, March 16 (AP).—Dublin celebrates St. Patrick's Day tomorrow, but without the benefit of enough shamrocks.

A heavy blizzard left hundreds of acres of the little green plants buried under snow.

Nevertheless, there'll be enough green things at least to confuse the eye, and plenty of fun, but it will be a dry, dry day.

There will be a big military parade, sports, dancing, singing, dinners and revelry — but no liquor will be sold tomorrow.

Pawhuska, Okla., March 16 (AP).—Osage Indians enthusiastically welcomed Mrs. Roosevelt to their homeland today.

Aged chiefs in brilliant native dress and young members of the tribe in modern attire joined Pawhuska townspeople in greeting the First Lady.

12 Are Killed In 2 Clashes in Mexico Village

2 Soldiers and 4 Women Die in Fights Started by Agrarians.

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, March 16.—Dispatches received here tonight reported 12 persons were killed, including two Federal soldiers and four women, and an undetermined number wounded in two armed conflicts between troops and agrarians in San Pedro El Alto, Mexico state village.

The dispatches, which came from Toluca, Mexico state capital, said the clashes occurred late last Saturday.

Sergt. Alejandro Gomez Mejia, everely wounded in Toluca Hospital, said he and two soldiers were attacked when they appeared in San Pedro El Alto as escorts for a civil official and a government engineer who was to survey community lands.

He said the agrarians opened fire upon the party, killing the soldiers and wounding the engineer and himself. The civil official escaped unhurt.

When the nearest military office was notified of the incident, a lieutenant and a small detachment was dispatched to the village.

The lieutenant, the report said, asked the return of the dead and wounded but the agrarians refused and the soldiers opened fire.

GET CHANGED TO OIL-PLATING

Spring's here, but let's not put any loud "new suits" on all the old oil bogeymen. After all, botherless engine lubrication gets down to a few calm facts that are facts.

No. 1 . . . You want to be certain that your engine doesn't grind every time you start, while oil is "coming up" from below. Oil-Plating, produced only by Conoco Germ Processed oil, can never lose time "coming up," because it's already there!

For the patented Germ Process creates such a powerful attraction between oil and metal that the inside of your engine becomes Oil-Plated. And you know that platings aren't runny, but stay up in place. That's the way Oil-Plating will stay up to ward off all the worst starting wear you ever heard of.

And No. 2 . . . Whether you've got a "good old car" or the latest thing, you want to make any driving schedule without being nervous about the heat indicator and the oil level. You can easily keep them where they belong. This is exactly why: the Germ Process creates a far stronger normal type of oil film and then checks friction still further by means of modern Oil-Plating—entirely extra . . . exclusive to Conoco Germ Processed oil. Costs no more when you change; costs you less all season. Continental Oil Company is that we want to infuse new blood."

Judges Cloistered.

He said the judges are living in a "cloistered" atmosphere, that it was difficult for them under such circumstances to "understand the facts and realities of life."

"For obvious reasons, those whose lives are cast in an environment remotely situated from the daily lives of the teeming millions who serve in the work shops, mills, mines, factories and industries of the Nation cannot grasp and understand the social and economic problems which so vitally affect these workers," Green told the committee.

Burke asked if it was necessary "to be out working in a mine somewhere" to keep the common touch. Green said he didn't mean that, but the court needed viewpoints "fresh" from the people. He said he thought Justice Cardozo was an example of the type of judge he thought was needed.

"How about Parker, (Federal Judge John J. Parker, who upheld the 'yellow dog' contract), he was fresh?" said Connally.

Caution Is Urged.

"He was too fresh," said Green.

"Be careful," said Burke, "you know we can't mention any names."

A question by Connally, on whether Green favored "a written constitution," drew another interruption from Dieterich, and again Connally slapped back.

"These Senators seem to think you need a guardian," said Connally. "You understand I'm not badgering you."

"I don't protest," said Green. He said he thought the Constitution was "big enough and broad enough to square with the social and economic needs of each generation." He said no amendment was needed to meet the present problem.

At one point, Senator M. M. Logan (Democrat), Kentucky, observed that the Constitution was like a "tight rope" the Supreme Court was walking. He said there are "two schools of thought on that subject."

Logan, Ashurst Clash.

"It should keep its feet on the rope and lean either to the right or to the left," said Logan, "or it should stand erect in walking the rope."

"If you are not a tight-rope walker, you will not be in the Senate very long," put in Ashurst.

"But you have to use your balance," added Logan.

Pointer in hand, Miller faced the Senators with his court age chart as the committee went into its first afternoon session.

After pointing out how the average age of justices had advanced irregularly for 150 years, to a present peak of 72 years, Miller observed that 11 laws had been invalidated from 1935 to 1936. The next largest number of invalidations occurred in 1919-1922, when the average of justices was 68 to 69, and 9 laws were ruled unconstitutional, said Miller.

Angle Not Weighed.

Burke questioned Miller's thesis that age was a determining factor. The Nebraskan pointed out that invalidations increased after the depression, after the World War and after the Civil War. He asked if the stress and haste of the legislation weren't responsible for its invalidation.

Miller said it "undoubtedly played a part," but he hadn't weighed that in his chart.

Dieterich asked if the number of Constitutional cases received by the courts was considered in preparing the chart.

When Miller said "he had not had time" to consider those factors, Burke charged that without them "your chart is meaningless," and Dieterich, a friend of the court plan, said he "couldn't associate the age of the justices with their decisions."

"You prepared that chart with only age in mind," said Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming.

Result Unforeseen.

"But I didn't know what result I would get," said Miller.

"Why didn't you develop all of the factors instead of bringing up this little chart?" put in Connally. "You have rationalized that the big thing in this is the ages of justices. With you it is as simple as, 'How old is Anne?'"

Miller repeated he had not had time. At the suggestion of Dieterich he said he would try to prepare another chart weighing all of the factors.

Logan came to Miller's defense with the opinion that other factors would only strengthen conclusions drawn from the present chart.

Miller told the committee he did not favor removing any of the older judges, but thought an infiltration of younger judges would improve the court "balance" and reflect itself in the opinions. He said the President's plan would accomplish that objective.

"There is nothing in this bill that assures appointment of younger justices," said Dieterich. "That is just your personal view."

At one point Miller told the committee the court would ultimately come down to nine, when older justices retire, regardless of the number of additional judges named. O'Mahoney pointed out that the bill provided otherwise for a "permanent" increase. "Haven't you read the bill?" asked O'Mahoney. Miller said he had, but interpreted it differently.

Il Duce Dedicates Arch to 'Empire'

Sirte Desert, Libya, via Field Wireless to Rome, March 16 (AP).—Premier Mussolini, driving 250 miles into the heart of the desert, last night inaugurated a triumphal arch commemorating the mordern Italian empire.

Thousands of Arabs drove their flocks of sheep across the desert for the ceremony.

Il Duce first walked under the arch and then drove beneath it in the glare of floodlights. The arch, constructed of travertine marble brought from Italy, is 100 feet high.

Mussolini slept tonight in the desert, sheltered by a tent. Outside his tent a leopard, captured in the desert, stood guard.

amounting to 4 pe rcent of all wages earned by an employe after last December 31.

Processions for the retirement board are the same as at present, three members, each receiving $10,000 a year for a five-year term, one member selected by employes, one by the roads and the third "neutral." Present members of the board are Murray W. Latimer, chairman, James A. Dailey and Lee M. Eddy. President Roosevelt, however, has nominated Latimer to be a member of the Social Security Board.

Persons subject to the railroad act are excluded from provisions of the social security act.

Substitute Tax Rate.

The substitute tax rate on payrolls up to $300 monthly for any worker will be 5 per cent for 1937, 1938 and 1939, 5½ per cent for three years, 6 per cent for three years, 6½ per cent for three years and then 7 per cent permanently, with the employe and the road each paying half.

The present tax act would be repealed and all money held by the roads in the form of deductions from wages prior to last January 1 would be returned to the employes, and money set aside by the roads for their share of the tax, whose collection by the government was enjoined, would be retained by the roads. Of money deducted from wages since January 1 the roads would pay to the government two and a half per cent on the payroll, return the other one per cent to the employes, and pay to the government also their own two and one-half per cent of the payroll. Dropping of the present litigation, subject to approval of the Attorney General, is provided for, in effect.

Those conducting the negotiations that led to the agreement were, in addition to Pelley and Harrison:

For the employes, B. M. Jewell, Railway Employes Department of the American Federation of Labor; J. A. Phillips, Order of Railway Conductors; E. J. Manion, Order of Railway Telegraphers, and James J. Delaney, Masters, Mates and Pilots of America.

Servant Goes On Stand in Baldwin Trial

Chauffeur Accuses Attorney of Attempt to Blame Murder on Him.

By the Associated Press.

Huntington, W. Va., March 16.—Mrs. Juliette Enslow's colored chauffeur, Judge Johnson, related from the stand today he told police last October he believed Charles Baldwin was trying to "pin" the slaying of the wealthy widow on him.

Johnson, who found a billfold on a walk around the house last October 17 and led to the discovery of Mrs. Enslow's body, was on the stand all afternoon of the second day of the trial of Baldwin, son of Mrs. Enslow by a previous marriage.

His testimony was the subject of vigorous attack by Baldwin's attorneys, who claimed his original statements to police and at the 41-year-old defendant's hearing in November were at variance with some of his testimony at the trial.

Baldwin, against whom the State has asked a first-degree verdict on a charge of killing his socially prominent mother, showed the same interest in the second day's proceedings as he did at first, listening closely and often conferring with his attorneys.

Although the defense objected at every point, Col. George S. Wallace, co-prosecutor, got into the record some of the statements Johnson made during investigation of the death of Mrs. Enslow. She was found dead on the floor of her third avenue mansion by her housekeeper.

Some of the questioning at police headquarters was done by Ora Slater, noted Cincinnati detective, who entered the case in its early days at the request of members of the family. He appeared in the courtroom this afternoon and was the last witness of the day.

Wallace in questioning the colored chauffeur said:

"At the time you were being questioned by police didn't you say, 'I know he (Baldwin) is trying to pin it on me, I am innocent, but since he is so smart I am going to tell everything I know?'"

"Yes, sir," the witness replied.

Hush-Hush Or Health?

Medical Groups Meet Tonight To Discuss Venereal Diseases

Public Invited to Attend Open Session; Problem Called Everybody's Because of Widespread Danger of Spread to All Classes.

By Gerald G. Gross.

(This article is one in a series to acquaint citizens with the tragic neglect of the venereal disease problem in the District of Columbia.)

Mr. Average Citizen and his family, snug and healthy in their warm parlor, quite excusably never give a thought to jammed venereal clinics, doddering tabetics, syphilitic criminals behind bars, paretics in asylums or children in institutions for the blind.

"What does that have to do with us?"

Just this:

Mr. Citizen is being taxed to keep in institutions the lawbreaker, the insane, the feeble-minded and the blind whose public wardship is directly attributable to syphilis.

He is footing the bills for doles to shattered families who owe their plight to venereal disease—and there are many of them in Washington.

A portion of his Community Chest contribution is being dedicated to alleviation of the suffering—physical, mental and spiritual—produced by the Capital's most prevalent communicable disease.

Filters to Higher Class.

In his complacency he may well consider the words of Surgeon General Thomas Parran:

"Even granted the hypothesis that syphilis were a reservoir of disease in the one lowest social class of the population, epidemiologists insist that such disease always filters through to the strata of population above it. For example, the excess tuberculosis mortality among the white population of several Southern States probably is because of domestic and personal services rendered them by colored people with an abnormally high prevalence of tuberculosis."

The problem is not merely the Health Department's nor the physician's nor the social worker's—nor the victim's. Until the spirochete and the gonococcus are exterminated, as long as there is an intermingling society of the infected and the uninfected, it will be everyone's business to help solve that problem.

And tonight presents a splendid opportunity to start.

The District Medical Society and the District Social Hygiene Society have announced that the public is invited to attend their annual joint meeting which will begin at 8 p. m. It will be held in the former's auditorium at 1718 M street northwest.

Backbone of Campaign.

From a professional standpoint, the physician is the backbone of Washington's — and the Nation's — campaign against syphilis and gonorrhea. At least 50 per cent of the venereal disease sufferers under treatment here are going to him privately, it is estimated. He is giving his time and services gratis to the clinics, municipal and hospital, which are caring for the other 50 per cent.

When his collective self gets together with the organization which has been plugging patiently since 1918 to reduce the "V. D." toll, and that meeting is open to all, an interesting, educational evening may be expected.

Ray H. Everett, executive secretary of the District Social Hygiene Society, will speak on "The Physician, the Public and Venereal Control." Working under a modest budget, supplemented by Community Chest allotments, the society reaches thousands of people yearly with its health and sex education lectures, office consultations, lending library, radio broadcasts and printed articles.

Movie to Be Shown.

Showing of the motion picture, "For All Our Sakes," will be a highlight of the assembly. Concerned with the problem of syphilis, it was produced by the American Social Hygiene Association, of which Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, former Secretary of the Interior, is president.

This will be followed by a discussion between Dr. Harry A. Fowler and Dr. William H. Hough, who possess many decades of experience in the treatment of gonorrhea and syphilis.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, will summarize plans to combat the local problem. Treatment of syphilis in the dispensary will be the subject of a lecture by Dr. George W. Creswell, who is the syphilologist of the Health Department and George Washington University Hospital clinics.

As has been emphasized and re-emphasized by all who are directing their efforts toward control of venereal diseases, no genuine progress can be made until general realization of the issue's importance exists.

Therefore the meeting tonight, an ideal means of bringing the doctor and the social hygienist en rapport with the layman, assumes extra significance.

$200,000 Lost Monthly From TVAInjunction

Brief Filed in Court Also Claims Public Is Losing.

By the Associated Press.

Covington, Ky., March 16.—The Tennessee Valley Authority declared in a brief filed today with the United States Circuit Court of Appeals that an injunction granted to 19 power companies three months ago by United States District Judge John Gore of middle Tennessee, was costing the TVA more than $200,000 a month.

The brief was in support of the TVA's motion for dissolution of the injunction which temporarily prevented expansion of the authority's power program. The power companies have 25 days in which to file their briefs supporting the injunction. A hearing has been set for April 16.

"Unless reversed," the TVA brief said, "this judgment will endure for at least six months. The mere dollars and cents damage can be easily calculated.

"This does not include the loss to the public in failing to obtain the benefits of the Government-owned power or to the authority in the disruption of its organization."

The brief pointed out that Judge Gore's decree permitted TVA to continue construction of an already started transmission line to the edge of a city but forbade "the construction of the sub-station which is necessary to make the line useful."

It then asserted that while the "TVA is being thus tied up, the power companies are entirely free to monopolize the market by binding the authority's potential customers to long-term contracts and thus foreclose the government from effecting a disposal of its power and undermine the faith of the public.

"The complainants are left free to build spite lines skimming the cream of rural territory and thus precluding indefinitely the electrification of the surrounding rural areas."

The TVA attorneys repeated their challenge of Judge Gore's jurisdiction, contending no suit of the character could be started outside "the northern district of Alabama."

Budget Plan of Eccles Called 'Partial Solution'

Salt Lake City, March 16 (AP).—Orval W. Adams, first vice president of the American Bankers Association, today called Marriner S. Eccles' plan for a balanced Federal budget only a "partial solution of the problem."

Adams termed Eccles' proposal for a balanced budget through increased taxation "a timely, courageous and intelligent contribution to a correct solution" of the problem, but added "reckless and extravagant governmental expenditures must also be curtailed if a really balanced budget is to be achieved."

390,289 Tax Refunds Approved for Mellons

Philadelphia, March 16 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals approved yesterday tax refunds totaling $390,289 to Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, and the estate of his brother, R. B. Mellon, paid on income from two distillery companies in which they were interested prior to prohibition.

The court upheld a ruling by District Judge R. M. Gibson, at Pittsburgh, in February, 1936, that assessment of the taxes on sums received from A. Overholt & Co. and the West Overton Distilling Co., during 1920, were illegal, since the two companies were in liquidation at that time.

Coast Love Slayer Passes Fifth Day In 'Horror Coma'

Los Angeles, March 16 (AP).—Muttering and weeping, Helen Wills Love tossed on a jail cot today in the fifth day of her "horror coma" while authorities awaited an opportunity to take her to court to hear her murder sentence.

Phychiatrists hopefully treated the 31-year-old woman, convicted of killing the man she claimed as her secret husband. Last Thursday Mrs. Love told a jail matron she could "will herself to die." But psychiatrists said it was not a self-induced hypnotic sleep. They termed it a "case of severe indigestion of a horror worse than death."

Dr. Samuel M. Marcus, police psychiatrist, told authorities it was a case of split consciousness—the same thing that causes a person to forget a name or suffer amnesia. Mrs. Love's case, he said, is the most intense form of the condition. Another psychiatrist said he knew of a case which extended for 23 years.

Italy's Fleet in Tripoli Booms Welcome to Duce

Tripoli, Libya, March 16 (AP).—Thundering guns of the Italian fleet welcomed Benito Mussolini today to the Libyan capital.

By plane and motor, Il Duce sped up the North African coast to receive a noisy welcome from the fleet and from Arab leaders. Italy's warships were anchored in the harbor, where Stephen Decatur, then a young naval lieutenant, staged a daring night raid that aided the embryonic United States Navy to win its first great naval engagement in 1804.

'Unfair' Trade Practices Laid ToOilCompany

Federal Trade Unit Says Texas Firm Hindered Competition.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Trade Commission accused the Texas Co. yesterday of hindering competition by closing service stations to competitors' products.

In a formal complaint against the big corporation, which has headquarters in New York and distributes petroleum and automobile accessories through more than 40,000 stations, the commission alleged violations of both the Clayton and the trade commission acts.

It said the company had made filling station leases and merchandise sales to dealers conditional upon their agreement not to deal in parts and accessories sold by certain competitors. Also, a commission statement asserted:

"The respondent company is alleged to have entered into contracts with B. F. Goodrich Co., Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., Champion Spark Plug Co., Westinghouse Lamp Co., Handy Governor Corporation, of Detroit, and Anderson Co., of Gary, Ind., to purchase various accessories to be distributed for the most part through its lessees and contracting dealers, the respondent company receiving a commission on sales.

"Accessories made by such companies are alleged to have been furnished to and forced upon its dealers by the Texas Co. on the condition and with the understanding that they should not deal in products competing with these manufacturers' makes of accessories for which the Texas Co. had contracted.

"In certain instances the respondent company allegedly threatened cancellation of service station contracts to compel operators to deal exclusively in products of the manufacturers named."

The Hero Of Santiago.

Rear Admiral Richard Pearson Hobson, dead at the age of 66, spent the major part of his life in trying unsuccessfully to keep up with the glamorous reputation he made in his youth.

This sounds more critical than is the case. As a campaigner for prohibition, as a foe of the drug evil, recently as a vigorous opponent of the President's Supreme Court reform plan, Admiral Hobson was always engaged in doing what he conceived to be his duty as a man and patriot. But noble and worthwhile as were these activities, they were inevitably tinged with anticlimax. Never again could Hobson climb the sunlit heights he occupied after his exploit in sinking the collier Merrimac in Santiago Harbor. That courageous and spectacular act, from which he miraculously escaped alive, made him overnight a great national hero, the subject of delirious acclaim.

His later activities revealed the same high sense of duty. Probably his staunch advocacy of the various causes that at one time or other absorbed his energies stemmed from the same instincts that made him steer the Merrimac right into the teeth of the Spanish guns.

Coupled with this instinct there may also have been the unconscious desire to recapture that moment of great achievement which had been his in 1898. He never did so. Everywhere he was hailed not as Hobson the prohibitionist, nor as Hobson the fighter against the drug evil, but as Hobson of the Merrimac and Santiago.

At the end of his life he may have felt about that exploit the way Rachmaninoff feels about his prelude in C sharp minor or Paderewski about his famous minuet.

Blackshirt And Fez.

Seizing the occasion of Premier Mussolini's visit to Libya, both the Duce and the Italian viceroy, Marshal Balbo, have proclaimed Italy as a Moslem power.

This, of course, is literally correct. A large percentage of the 700,000 inhabitants of Italy's large but barren North African colony consists of followers of the prophet. But it is difficult to believe it was simply for the purpose of calling attention to this statistical fact that Mussolini went out of his way to emphasize Italy's protective attitude toward Moslems. It is more likely that the gesture had a dynamic purpose, namely, to secure for Italy the good will not only of the Mohammedans of Libya but of Mohammedans everywhere, using that good will as a weapon against Italy's rivals.

Altogether the Mohammedan faith claims no fewer than 209,000,000 adherents concentrated, for the most part, in North Africa and the Near East, in the Arabian peninsula and certain parts of India, in sections of Russia, China and Afghanistan. Some of them live in independent nations such as Irak and Saudi Arabia. Most of Islam, however, is under foreign and particularly British rule. Should Mussolini manage to win the support of the Islamic world it is easy to see what endless trouble he might be able to cause the British.

He is not the first who has had that dream. More than a century ago Napoleon temporarily let himself be lured by it, although in his case the dream vanished with the failure of his Egyptian campaign. More recently Kaiser William II, on a visit to Damascus, proclaimed himself the friend of the Moslems of the world. That proved more than a flamboyant gesture. In subsequent years Germany worked hard and persistently to extend German influence into Moslem lands. The spearpoint of that drive was the Berlin-Bagdad line which the British, and with good reason, viewed with ill-concealed suspicions.

Now, perhaps, Mussolini feels it is his turn to seek to make the dream of Napoleon and of the late Kaiser a reality. The British have more than one reason for believing it is part of the Duce's program. They recall the efforts made not long ago by the Italians to inflame Egypt against its British overlords and the Arabs of Palestine against the Jews and the mandatory power. They recall the persistent Italian intrigues in Yemen, where Italy for years sought to establish a diplomatic foothold whence they could snipe at British interests in the Arabian peninsula.

Whether intended as a harmless gesture or not, Mussolini's pro-Islamic pronouncements in Libya will therefore not be ignored either in London or Paris. Disunited as Islam has been for centuries, even more so than Christendom, there is plenty of dynamite in the Mohammedan world which an able and reckless adventurer may hope to use to devastating effect.

How To Build Fascism.

The participation of John L. Lewis in a huge anti-Nazi mass meeting in New York is of itself a perfectly natural matter. Such political gatherings, directed against a foreign government with which we maintain friendly relations, are of course a strange commentary on pending neutrality legislation. But since nobody in their senses expects that legislation to survive any serious test, the anomaly is more apparent than real.

The Jews and the labor unions have suffered most under Hitler's dictatorship. So it is entirely appropriate for the most powerful American labor leader to appeal to a well-organized Jewish gathering for joint opposition to "the deadly terror practiced by the Nazi government." And if Mr. Lewis seizes the opportunity to slip in a little propaganda for the C. I. O., that is understandable, too. He is too shrewd a politician to let pure humanitarianism obscure any opportunity for his personal advancement. Nor would he make the mistake of saying anything which might alienate Italian workers when indicting Germany for anti-labor practices copied from those which Mussolini introduced.

A great many Americans, however, will wish that John L. Lewis would cast the beam out of his own eye before he starts forth so valiantly to battle the mote in the vision of a foreign Feuhrer. There are those who will see a lot of backfire in the statement of the C. I. O. chieftain, applied to Germany, that "We have before us an object lesson and a warning."

We have, indeed. As Mr. Lewis was speaking, at Madison Square Garden, of "our responsibility to preserve democracy," several thousand of his followers in Detroit were entrenched in factories they had seized by force, giving no indication that they intend peacefully to obey the inevitable legal order for their evacuation. Indeed, one of Mr. Lewis' chief lieutenants and co-workers was calmly predicting that "I don't think they'll come out of the plants." Meanwhile the C. I. O. Fuehrer, in New York, was solemnly telling his audience that American workers "must become conscious of their responsibilities and of their privileges." Is the seizure and fortification of the property of others among these "privileges"?

Mr. Lewis would do better to emphasize union responsibilities to his followers in Detroit. For the only possible outcome of continued sit-down strikes, as the Germans are now complacently pointing out, will be to bring in this country either an overthrow of constituted government or repressive tactics of the sort which the Nazis have successfully used against German labor. When organized labor defies government, the latter must either surrender to the aggression or it must suppress what is clearly incipient revolution. There is no other alternative.

A leader of the prominence of John L. Lewis ought to know enough of the history of his own times to realize that dictatorships do not evolve at the bidding of a single ambitious man. Mussolini came to power as a direct result of the reaction against communistic seizures of Italian factories, in no essential different from the tactics which Mr. Lewis tolerates, if he is not actually abetting, here. There were other causes partially responsible for Hitler's triumph. But in Germany also Communist direct action, of which the sit-down strike is thoroughly representative, was a potent factor in aiding the Nazi rise to power.

John Lewis, playing with the fire which produces fascism, solemnly warns a New York mass meeting against permitting Nazi doctrines to take root in this country. Only a highly emotionalized audience could fail to see the supreme irony of his diatribes. For they are directed against a repressive system which his own tactics, unless soon renounced, will greatly help to establish here.

The Senate On Art.

Unlike the House, the Senate could not bring itself to accept without considerable debate Andrew Mellon's offer of his art collection, a building in which to house it and a sizable fund to provide for further acquisitions. That it finally did, however, is a source of satisfaction not only to Washington but to the Nation as a whole. The National Capital will now receive its long-discussed National Gallery together with a nucleus which, for wealth and range, beggars the beginnings of any other public collection.

Principal objection to the offer centered about the proviso that five of the nine trustees of the gallery shall be approved by Mr. Mellon and that their offices shall be self-perpetuating. It was argued that this would put the gallery forever beyond the control of the Government, which will be called upon to provide $300,000 annually for maintenance. Moreover, it is suggested that the majority of five, in view of their virtual appointment by one who has specialized in Old World art, would be prejudiced against the works of American artists. These rather hectic fears were all competently allayed by Senator Connally. A compromise on 15 trustees was not even suggested.

Those Senators who claim a concern for the art interests of the Capital and country might better have saved their energies for intelligent opposition to the projected Tidal Basin memorial to Thomas Jefferson. There, plainly, is vast room for question. Calling for an expenditure of $3,000,000, its plans and its site have both aroused a storm of persuasive and evidently increasing protest.

Gaps In The Argument.

Marriner Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, emphasizes that he will continue to advocate an easy-money policy until the full productive capacity of the Nation is utilized. Yet he concludes his important statement with a warning that to achieve and maintain balanced recovery a continued easy-money policy must be accompanied by a prompt balancing of the Federal budget and subsequent retirement of the public debt. He further favors increased income and profits taxes to permit a reduction in Federal indebtedness as private debt expands.

There are obvious flaws in Mr. Eccles' argument. It is inconsistent to defend the maintenance of present abnormally low interest rates, made possible by the Treasury's methods of financing deficits, and simultaneously to urge speedy elimination of such deficits by increasing taxes. While the attainment of a balanced budget is imperative, if inflation is to be checked, increased taxation as an alternative to retrenchment would certainly tend to retard industrial expansion more decisively than a moderate rise in current interest rates.

Mr. Eccles warns that inflation lies ahead unless the budget is balanced and the Federal debt reduced. But he is confident that the vast volume of bank deposits already created by deficit financing is not responsible for current inflationary manifestations. He emphasizes the danger that too pronounced increases in wages and shortening of hours may raise labor costs so rapidly as to check productive activity. But such fears seem to be largely anticipatory, since industrial activity on the whole is still keeping ahead of the rise in the general price level.

The Federal Reserve chairman further discourses at length on the non-monetary causes of price increases. Yet he is silent about those hectic advances in the prices of various basic raw materials in which speculation, financed by abundant supplies of cheap money, has been rampant of late. He does not explain how he proposes to quench this speculative fever without resort to some measure of credit restriction.

In fact, Mr. Eccles assumes throughout his discussion that the causes of the price increases which alarm him are non-monetary in origin and hence must be combatted by non-monetary means. Thus, he says that if the upward spiral of wages and prices should lead toward inflationary price levels, the Government ought to intervene energetically to correct such abuses.

As long as the budget remains unbalanced, the Federal Reserve authorities will, of course, be compelled by political pressure to cling to their present cheap-money policies. From this springs the temptation to make a virtue out of necessity, to find excuses for refusing to abandon cheap money while cannily seizing opportunity to predict trouble ahead if the fiscal policies which create and perpetuate cheap money are not speedily reformed.

Apart from the gaps in Mr. Eccles' logic, he is open to criticism for assuming that any rise, however moderate, from the present abnormally low level of interest rates would unduly restrict borrowing and retard business recovery. That cannot be substantiated. Indeed, if the budget were balanced, as Mr. Eccles urges, the confidence created would provide a bigger and better stimulus for business than artificially low interest rates. These discourage investment, encourage speculation and definitely contribute to the inflationary price rise which Mr. Eccles wishes to avert.

Best-Sellers From Boston.

There is all the difference in the world between "Little Women" and "Mutiny on the Bounty." The plot of the former was knit together with lavendar and old lace. The Nordhoff-Hall thriller was hewn out of history and he-men. Yet it is this very variety which makes publishing a thrilling gamble. The gap between these two books is indicative of the changing trend of reading tastes. But also between them lie 64 years of success for the Little, Brown Publishing Company, celebrating its centennial this year.

When Charles C. Little and James Brown entered into partnership for the purpose of publishing books, the first Oliver Wendell Holmes was just beginning the practice of medicine; Whittier was acting as agent of the New England Anti-Slavery Society; and Hawthorne was despairing of ever selling his works. Though the word "best-seller" had not been coined, the firm was kept busy filling the continuous demands for William H. Prescott's "Ferdinand and Isabella." Later on "Quo Vadis" became the leading royalty reaper, followed by successes still on every reader's tongue.

Much water and many wishy-washy books have flowed under the publishing bridge since Little, Brown first put out its shingle, one hundred years ago. But a cursory glance at the best-sellers published by them during this period demonstrates that they have been reasonably adept in gauging what the public wants. Certainly they seem to have profited by one of their 1937 titles and learned "How to Worry Successfully."

Unfortunate Misquotation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am sure that for the benefit of your readers you will want your attention called to an unfortunate misquotation of the statement by President Conant, of Harvard University, in The Post of March 15.

The Post quotes President Conant as saying:

> Personally I should wish to live under the present Constitution as written, but not as interpreted by the minority of the present court.

The presence of the word "not" entirely changed the spirit of President Conant's statement. What he said was:

> Personally I should wish to live under the present Constitution as written, but as interpreted by the minority of the present court.

"One Horse The Driver."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Only a short time ago I heard the President shouting, "Happy days are here again," but recently he announced that the country is facing a crisis quite as bad as the one he saved us from when he took charge of the country.

Why the crisis?

That bad boy, the Supreme Court, is to blame. He has thrown a monkey wrench into the machinery. Is that what we sometimes call "passing the buck?"

Now (according to his mind) our only way out is to have six strong young men appointed to spank soundly this bad boy as he gives instructions, and "do it now." Would it not be well under these circumstances to cross out the word "Supreme," and insert instead "Personnel of My Own Selection" Court?

In two of the President's talks he used for illustration the three-horse team plowing, to represent the three divisions of the Government, but through my glasses ("fitted to the needs of another generation") his illustration seems not so appropriate, since one of the horses seems to be the driver of the team.

OBSERVER.

"The Last Barrier."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since the President's Victory Dinner address in which he clearly stated his real reasons for wanting to pack the Supreme Court, one does not have to be at all far-sighted to see, that if accomplished, this is the last barrier against dictatorship.

It is only the "New Deal" on this side of the Atlantic, but let it secure the strangle hold which it is now endeavoring to secure on our "Last Tribunal of Justice" and there will be no case of mistaken identity.

REAL DEMOCRACY.
Washington, March 10.

"Keystone Of Institutions."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. LaGuardia in his speech at the Rialto Theater, speaking out of an abysmal ignorance of our institutions and of their historical background, vented his spleen upon the Supreme Court, charging it with "hampering and retarding progress."

I beg to remind him that the Supreme Court is the keystone of our institutions, and is the guarantee that our Government will be one of laws and not of men. Furthermore, ours is the oldest Government in the world today, all preceding governments having crumbled into the dust and "gone with the wind." I do not except even the British government, as it is not the government it was at the time our Constitution was adopted.

I would like to tell Mr. LaGuardia that our Constitution is the embodiment and the expression of the hopes, the aspirations, and the struggles of mankind for 2,000 years, being as it is a government of balanced powers with an independent judiciary that stands as the guardian and protector of the liberties and the property rights of the citizen.

Destroy this balance of powers and the independence of the courts and the road to dictatorship will be wide open.

ALEXANDER SIDNEY LANIER.

"Lawlessness."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The proposal of the President to "pack" (there is no other name for it) the Supreme Court is outrageous from whatever angle considered. It can find no justification in any right principle, whether of statesmanship, good of country or otherwise, to say nothing of the bad faith with the American people which it involves. It is in essence lawlessness, even though it may be technically within the law, because its very aim is to attain certain ends without doing what the law provides for attaining such ends, namely, amending the Constitution.

But besides this, the rank insult and humiliation to which the justices of the Supreme Court are being subjected is one of the most contemptible episodes in American history. Insult and humiliation were implied, if not expressed, in the proposal itself, in the President's message to Congress and, judging from reports, from the attitude of the President himself during the press conference at which he announced the proposal. Insult, humiliation and, if you please, sheer misrepresentation are both expressed and implied by the President in his two recent radio addresses, as well as by other proponents of his proposal. The attempt of the President to link floods and dust storms with the Supreme Court is something fair-minded people can never forget.

ARTHUR P. HOGAN.

'The Practical Thing.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Because President Roosevelt's Administration so far has been so good, so humanitarian it was with sorrow I listened to the Victory speech and attack on our Supreme Court by innuendo and insinuation. We all glory in what he stated he intended to continue to fight for; but when he states the Supreme Court, or the Constitution is in the way of accomplishing it, we do not agree. Also when he states the Supreme Court is corrupt or senile we do not agree. If he has a corrupt or senile Supreme Court, instead of denouncing it, why doesn't he do the practical thing to get results by preferring specific charges.

EDWARD THOMPSON.
Arlington, Va., March 6.

Six-Year President?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While on the question of remodeling the Supreme Court may it not be well also to change the tenure of office of President. A single term of six years with the choice of appointing two members to the bench at any time during the Administration of the President—the jurist with the most extended service to be automatically replaced by the appointee. Any vacancies occurring through death could be filled as heretofore, and the majority vote, as at present, to prevail.

Three Views On Washington Traffic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been reading with interest the articles by your Mr. H. F. Wentworth and evidently he is a writer who really knows what he is writing about and has some first-hand knowledge. I read his articles last year under the caption, "You Cannot Arrest Me," and I want to commend The Post for giving time and space to this very important problem.

There is, however, one thing I am not so sure is just fair and proper. That is, bringing Lieut. Kremel, the recognized traffic expert, here. Is it to show our men up? There is an old saying, "A prophet is not without honor, except in his own country," and that sure is true when we think of our traffic situation.

We have several outstanding traffic specialists in our own police department—men who, if they had the means to do with, could accomplish many things for our city.

Inspector Benjamin Lamb is an officer who has had years of experience, from the old days of service at Fourteenth street and New York avenue, up through the ranks to his present well-earned position. He knows traffic and can do anything anyone else can, if he had the means thereof.

Capt. Milton Smith is in every sense a "home-town boy who has made good." A product of this city, his years of experience as a bicycle and motorcycle officer made him a worthy aide to the inspector. I have heard him talk on traffic at several meetings, have read some of his written articles and have observed him in action. He, too, is a recognized authority on traffic and I am satisfied again if he, too, had sufficient man power and equipment, he could improve the services rendered.

We must not overlook the fact that the chief of police himself, Maj. Brown, is known throughout the entire Nation as an authority on traffic control, and was for years in charge of our traffic bureau.

So, without taking one ounce of credit from the lieutenant of traffic, Mr. Kremel, I still feel that even he cannot accomplish much more than our local men, without improved facilities and man power. Also the co-operation of our public.

The Post is to be praised for the idea of inviting him to come, because it may be a means of bringing to the attention of the public that in the Nation's Capital we have good "craftsmen," but they are using obsolete tools. We need new tools, with keen edges, to cut out the bad spots in our traffic disease.

OLD-TIME SUBSCRIBER.
Washington, March 15.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The article written by Howard F. Wentworth which you published March 13 telling about the testimony given at the coroner's inquest and the verdict of acquittal in the case of the death of Frank L. Perry, killed by an automobile, is very timely. If the facts are as stated, the verdict exonerating the operator of the car without even a reprimand for driving and drinking liquor at the same time is outrageous. It is to be hoped that the investigation ordered by the chief of police will establish the facts in the case, and if they are shown to be as given by Mr. Wentworth that the proper officials will take the necessary steps to prosecute the case notwithstanding the verdict of the coroner's jury.

The best way to reduce the number of automobile accidents is to reduce the number of reckless drivers. The only way to do this is to enforce the traffic regulations, not spasmodically, but every day, and without regard to who the offender is.

A pedestrian cannot hurt an automobile by walking into it, as some people seem to think. It is the absolute duty of the driver of an automobile to always be on the lookout for careless people and not simply run them down. If they fail to do this they are not driving carefully, and the strong probability is they are exceeding the speed limit or breaking some other safety regulation.

OLD SUBSCRIBER.
Washington, March 15.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter of Mr. Ernest J. Kendrick in your issue of March 13 reflects the feelings of many a pedestrian. His statement that the majority of accidents are caused by too much speed is the truth that so few wish to acknowledge.

The plain fact is that a high death rate, no matter how it is deplored, is preferred to a reduction of the speed limit. Otherwise, there would be a real clamor for its limitation.

Why cannot the pedestrian have the right to cross on the yellow light, when all traffic should cease? The cars cutting across from the side street often prevent his crossing at all. I understand that in Boston (where brains are put to use) such a regulation is in force. Why not here?

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Justice In Washington.

YOUR correspondent took a look around the Supreme Court today, and for a fact it is a lavish mausoleum in which the Old Men sit, and the more extravagant in its cold and stately vanity considering that they do most of their celebrating at home, where they can kick the cat, and just as well could do the rest in the Odd Fellows' Hall.

It does give a man a feeling that justice speaks out of a cloud and an almost irresistible impulse to purse the lips and blow a rude and impudent raspberry, just to see whether the clergy were well informed about the hereafter or merely speaking from hearsay. For surely that would be the end of the world, and the building would vanish in a puff of dust and all present would stand naked and embarrassed before the judgment seat.

* * * *

And yet, looking about some of the other splendors of the American Capital, one must allow that the Nine Old Men received no more than a fair share of the plunder, for there is no seat of government on earth fit to compare with the luxury and extravagance of Washington. If they have private shower baths so have the secretaries of the great departments, and private elevators, too, and limousines thrown in for prestige, and you could hold a royal coronation in the reception room of Mr. Farley's plant, and maybe someone will one day.

The building program began long before the New Deal, and Mr. Farley himself is always careful to explain that the great sweep of his quarters and the secluded bath and all were not his doing but his inheritance from the rascal Republicans, who doubtless expected to settle down for an indefinite reign.

Then, being driven out by such selfless patriots as Kelly and Nash, of Chicago; Curley, of Boston; Prendergast, of Missouri; Weiss, of New Orleans; Hague, of Jersey, and all that other roll of honest crusaders for justice and the right, they fled their palaces as the New Deal moved in.

And now, whether from the force of inherited commitments or merely for the love of symmetry and all nice things, the building program goes on and on.

* * * *

It may yet stretch to Baltimore or down to Richmond, for there is still a dearth of suitable offices and some of the patriots are compelled to serve their country in moldy old mansions haunted by the spooks of normalcy, privilege, prosperity and prohibition.

To be sure, the Nine Old Men do have their particular own retiring rooms, but there is no rude cabin in the backyard of the edifice where their opponent, Homer Cummings, presides over the Department of Justice and the G. P. U. Mr. Cummings is comfortably, not to say lavishly, housed in his department and the Young King Bradys of the secret police have a gym and a trainer to keep them lithe and fit for the game of cops and robbers, and plumbing of the very best.

Attention naturally falls on the Department of Justice in any consideration of the Nine Old Men and their accommodations, of which so much note has been made. For Old Homer must take the ultimate responsibility for the beatings which the New Deal has suffered in its contests before the Supreme Court and elsewhere down the line.

* * * *

Ferd Pecora came to town in the days of the great purge and combed enough wool off the economic royalists of the great boom to make prison suits for all of them, but somehow in the hands of Mr. Cummings this material tailored up into stylish business suits, and the scoundrels are still on the prowl for widows and orphans with a little insurance.

And, too, it was Mr. Cummings who had charge of the constitutional cases in which the New Deal was repulsed by the Nine Old Men.

His offices are big and luxurious, and he has access to any books that any private practitioner can consult, but somehow old Homer can't win for losing in this field of justice, although on the side of police work, especially in the New York night clubs and at the ringside, the record is very satisfactory.

Ordinarily when a man hires a lawyer and the lawyer drops a succession of close decisions in the courts the man just gets another, and if possible, better lawyer. In the case of the Department of Justice, however, Mr. Roosevelt seems to think that he is stuck with Mr. Cummings and prefers to change justices instead. Perhaps Mr. Roosevelt does this out of admiration for Cummings' sense of smell, which detected a change of atmosphere in the income tax cases against Huey Long's boys after the late Louisiana Purchase, as it is now called in Washington.

Well, no doubt about it, the Nine Old Men are sitting pretty in their mausoleum on the Hill. But so is Mr. Cummings in his palace down the hollow, although you can hire losing lawyers out of grubby desk rooms hard by any county courthouse, though hardly with Mr. Cummings' remarkably acute nose for changes of atmosphere.

The Two Masks

By Theodore Hall

No one, it can be stated with some confidence, ever accused the ancient Greeks of posturing. The thin, clean air of their Aegean has been taken as a symbol of their clarity. They saw with a sharp perfection of sight, whether it was the added amenity of inward leaning columns in the Acropolis or the merits of an altar to the unknown god. And in their view of man and human life which came to a focus, not in their mythology or their philosophy or their art, but in their drama, they divided aspects neatly into two parts and gave to each a mask. Both the tragic muse and the comic muse were masks worn before the face of humanity and the world.

We are somewhat different. Most of us—the reasons are tedious to go into—presume to think that the comic muse alone is a mask, a coloring, an escape. Our notorious liking for happy endings, in stories, films, even the technical composition of music, would seem to show that we want the comic or genial mask to hide the pure, tragic fact. Why should anyone put on a tragic mask? He but duplicates, we feel, his own features.

Wars and the rumors of wars, turbulence and commotion of many kinds, the specter of the threat to liberties for some, the specter of the proletariat of others these and their cousin-ideas, impersonal and personal, for one reason or another, lead most of us to see everything as black, dead black. But even in our most jingoist moments we cannot believe that we are a wiser or a clearer-sighted people than the Greeks. And they thought it fit, as you will please recall again, to use not one mask but two.

TWO smallish books on my table can be called as witnesses to the human permanence of these two masks. In Vardis Fisher's novellette—the editors of Story Magazine would have me call it a novella—entitled "April," the more sensitive and sympathetic among us will but recognize the utter truth of its tragedy. Those with less of those somewhat dubious qualities, or with those qualities better balanced, may not subscribe so quickly. In the case of Jules Romains' little holiday of farce, "The Boys in the Back Room," no one would mistake it for utter truth. Yet the former is no nearer the truth, the human center, than the latter.

Let me tell you a little about "April." Mr. Fisher, the author of that gaunt, tortured tetralogy dealing with Vridar Hunter, here narrates the story of June Weeg, a completely plain, completely charmless country girl of the Antelope hills of Idaho. She wants to be such a magnet to men as her mother once was—her mother now a mass of dull flesh bending eternally over cheap romantic novels. She wants to have a lover in the golden, perhaps tinsel, tradition—and there is only a preposterous farm hand who thinks himself a poet, and stodgy Sol Incham who has preserved a boring faithfulness toward June during what feels to her like 50 years.

So she pines, she looks at herself in brooks, she wonders what else will attract men save "a pretty face and a nice leg,"—she flirts dumpily and lucklessly with the farm-hand, she makes up wonderful and silly romantic conversations, and she gets nowhere. After a couple of ridiculous—or you may call them pathetic—attempts to break the wall around her, she discovers that Sol's house needs tending, that she is the one to do this, and that her lot belongs with his. After so much ineffectual grimness, the tale ends on a lyric note of surprising faith.

NOW Mr. Fisher has given his book the sub-title: "A Fable of Love," and his intention is as plain as was Ibsen's to decry the "perfect match," the "high romantic union," and to cast his vote for the partner at hand. As in all his novels, his theme again is the break-down of airy romanticism. But the very real force of his four autobiographical novels proceeded from that break-down in an intelligent, muscular-minded person, and here, having only an entirely dull girl as material, there is no force whatever. There is only our annoyance at the rather pat use of people who, for all their possible reality to the Antelope country, are still stage-prop.

Yet this story may seem to some readers as pure and inherent tragedy. For them I can only paraphrase my recollection—I wish I had the book at hand—of what Yeats in one of his volumes of autobiography said of John M. Synge. It was very striking. Synge, declared Yeats, in all his travels through the poor of West Ireland, in meeting, say a roadside beggar, would never once think of indulging in philanthropy. The beggar got no coin of his. But if the beggar had a fine head, a face full of character, a wit and a downright reality for him, then Synge gave his best attention and his friendship. Synge was artist, not philanthropist. And though that would be a most astonishing creed among us these days, and not solely for the reason that we are not artists, I think it should have a clarifying effect upon the reader when he comes to feel a turgid and lachrymose sympathy for book people—dare I say real people?—who simply and flatly have not the quality of Synge's rare old beggar.

VERY, very different is M. Romains' spree with "The Boys in the Back Room." It was written 27 years ago to amuse himself while commuting, and even now, he says in his preface with a trifle of fulsomeness, he finds it very comical and re-reads it to restore his morale.

For a full half of the book I bogged down in perplexity. I wondered how this ambling narrative of a group of poetic and bibulous young Parisian blades, who feel themselves insulted by the two country towns of Ambert and Issoire, who consult a somnambulist and through him plan their revenge, could ever by any possible standards of humor be called in the least comic. That first half is very feeble going indeed.

From there on, however, let the reader hang onto his spectacles, or her stays. That is, if the reader enjoyed Balzac's "Contes Drolatiques." No others should apply. For the nature of one of the feats of revenge, and M. Romains' unexpected and unnecessary sprinkling of the text with words of the little-boy-on-alley-walls order, make this warning only polite on my part.

But the book is more than hearty anecdote. Even at 25, M. Romains was stretching toward his great, current series of novels, the "Men of Good Will." In "The Boys"—"les copains"—he was celebrating the sheer joy together of young men, a feeling which has grown up into his mature theory that the world can be saved only by "men of good will" working together. And the heartfelt camaraderie of these gay dogs is something the masculine reader will remember with a sudden sense of a mask seen long ago, very genial and surprisingly precious.

I trust he may not find, when he looks up from the book, that things since then have assumed another and a very different mask.

Men "Intimate With Death"

Autobiography Discloses Real Emotions of Bullfighter.

Juan Belmonte Relates Rise to Supremacy as Torero.

By Howland H. Sargeant.

It was on Easter Sunday in 1934 that I last saw Juan Belmonte. El Gallo, Chicuelo and Perlacia had fought in mid-season form against brave bulls, but the applause for them was but a tiny whisper of the tumultuous ovation that brough Belmonte down from the audience for innumerable bows in the ring itself. It was Sevilla's way of hailing the return of her native son to the bullring after a seven-year retirement. Slight, almost frail in appearance, with an incredible ugliness that even his grace of movement could not entirely dissipate, it scarcely seemed possible that this could be the greatest living torero, the man who fought closer to the bulls than any other matador, who revolutionized the entire technique of bullfighting.

The tang of such memories whetted my desire to see if Belmonte himself could resolve the mystery. "This is the story of a man and not a treatise on bullfighting," writes translator Leslie Charteris, in a foreword which introduces the gentle reader to the somewhat less gentle art of tauromachy. Read the preface. It is semitechnical and a good supplement to "Death in the Afternoon" as background reading on bulls and toreros, and it will prepare you for an appreciation of the magnificent photographs and good pen and ink sketches to follow. Be on your guard, however, for the real value of this book is not as biography. As the chronicle of the rise of slum-born Juanito from Sevilla squalor to the triumph of Don Juan Belmonte, torero without peer, landowner, and friend to kings and dictators, this is only a minor variation on a well-worn theme. What is new and fresh is that here for the first time we learn at first hand what a bullfighter thinks, what he feels, and what he fears.

Mr. Fadiman and others have been pleased to scoff at the suggestion that "bullfighting is a spiritual and not a physical exercise." When Hemingway, or Charteris, or others of the vicarious school advance this argument, they are writing as critics, aesthetes, non-participants, and their findings need carry no extraordinary weight. But here we have the testament of a man who killed his first bull in 1910 at the age of 18, and who was drawn back to the practice of his profession in 1933 because he had never seriously thought of ceasing to be a bullfighter. This is the mature judgment, mellowed over the years, of a man who has earned the right to speak as a sort of elder statesman of his profession. In his peak year (1919) he fought in 109 corridas (which means facing death in the afternoon at least twice daily on three to four days a week) and he killed 234 bulls. Gorings? No one has ever counted them, but it is some indication that in 1935, at the age of 43, Belmonte fought in thirty corridas and was gored in his own words) "fourteen or fifteen times."

Let us listen to what he has to tell us about the one thing which he has loved with a consuming passion, to which he has dedicated his life. When Belmonte first came to public attention, every one marveled at his unorthodox "standstill" technique, for bullfighting at that time was governed by the principles described by Lagartijo, who said—"You stand there, and either you move yourself or the bull moves you." Belmonte, who was handicapped in the first place by physical weakness which practically prevented him from performing according to orthodox rules, had learned that "the man who stands still dominates the situation." His whole contribution to the art, he maintains, was simply the substitution of the then unheard of theory—"You stand there, and you don't move you—if you know how to fight."

This daring technique was Belmonte's springboard of success in his profession. I say "profession" advisedly, for he was a professional in the sense that he performed his task, whether he felt like it or not, whether weak from illness, tormented by unhealed wounds from recent gorings, or soul-weary at the flatness and the staleness of an unprofitable world. Belmonte felt himself to be more than a professional, however; he shows, sometimes naively and sometimes with philosophical insight, that he never ceased to regard himself as a true artist, engaged in a creative art. There were times when this inward fervor lessened, although his professional mastery increased. Then Belmonte would realize that his work was worth nothing, that he was incapable of feeling that intimate emotion which "the torero transmits to the public, as if an electric current flowed between them." This is "the moment of truth" described by Hemingway and other members of the passive audience as the culmination of the bull fight. What does it mean to the artist himself? Let Belmonte tell it in his own words.

"The art of bull fighting is first and foremost the deification of a state of mind; only when the torero is deeply moved, only when he goes into the arena with a lump in his throat, is he able to infuse the public with the same emotion. The emotion has as indefinable an origin as the emotion of love. When this emotion is present, however, Belmonte discovers in it the great marvel of bullfighting—"to convert the powerful and perilous reality of the animal into something that seems as impalpable as a veil held in the hands of a dancer. The bull was subject to me as I was to it. There came a time when I felt myself wrapped up in the bull, melted into one with it. After the corrida, I found that my costume was covered with the hairs which it had brushed off against me as it passed."

"After the corrida, I found that my costume was covered with the hairs which it had brushed off against me as it passed."

Belmonte's is a wistful testament in many ways. The old school enthusiast will tell you sadly that today the younger aficionados are only aficionados while they are in their seats. Football has lured many away, while others come to the bullring solely for a sensationalism which smacks of a Roman circus. Belmonte feels this change. Even "the moment of truth" is undergoing a process of falsification, until in the end it may become as counterfeit as the false pigtail which modern toreros have substituted for the natural plait of hair worn as their badge of office. He finds that the time is even now at hand when bull fighting will no longer be a paying business, when "everything that can be achieved has been done. The bull of today has no more interest; it has been dominated and conquered." As the technique of the men has become increasingly perfect, so the bull itself has learned how to be fought. The breeders have manufactured a fighting bull, in response to popular demand, which is a standarized industrial article. As a result, although the beauty of the fiesta remains, the drama and the supreme emotion are fading; it is becoming decadent.

Such is the credo of Belmonte the matador—this is his affirmation of faith in his art. I raise no question as to whether bullfighing can be so judged, or whether its exercise is properly of the spirit and not of the body. Let us not quibble over terms. The value of this book is primarily that for the first time the psychology and emotion of a bullfight are analyzed as experienced by the torero. To those who have never seen a bullfight, it may mean no more than that. I have seen a few. I have lived with young Spaniards just setting foot on the long and dangerous path which Belmonte took long before they were born. They were immature and incoherent and could tell me little of the emotion and psychology of their fights. They far preferred to display with pride the scars of the first goring—the caste mark of their profession.

To me, Belmonte's book explains in part the surge of mass emotion which seizes a bullfight audience at "the moment of truth," as the matador goes in over the horn to make the kill, at the conclusion of one of those rare and seldom-seen faenas of true magnificence. Hemingway describes this mass emotion as, by a process of empathy, the triumph of the audience itself over danger and death in the triumph of the matador. I (another passive critic) say that the only emotion comparable to it in my own experience is the instant made eternity as one swoops down the trestle of a ski jump, when there can be no turning back. Belmonte, the creator of such emotion, is peasant like in the directness and simplicity of his analysis. He writes—"The truth, the only truth, is that I was born this morning."

Good Fairy

"AND THEN YOU WISH," by John van Druten. (Little, Brown, $2.50.)

Fortunately for the dispositions of average, intelligent people who read, books like this come forth every now and again. Remember how "The Good Champions" rang a bell? Well, it's unsafe to predict, of course, but "And Then You Wish" should ring the same bell. It's an extremely fine novel.

Plenty of people have already discovered Mr. Van Druten for themselves. Possibly he is better known as a playwright than a novelist. "Young Woodley" was a highly successful, penetrating piece of dramatic writing, and the more recent "Flowers of the Forest" gave Katharine Cornell a vehicle worthy of her finest talents.

The author has here delineated a comfortable story about an average sort of London lady, a little past middle age, whose husband is dead, whose daughter is self-sufficient and selfish, and whose economic position is modest but secure. Her consuming interest is a nonparticipating delight in the mechanics of the theater. She is one of those solitary, plain persons you often see inscrutably enjoying plays from the less-expensive seats.

An inconsequential young man appears upon her horizon, and her semi-maternal, possesive instinct grapples his frustrated playwright soul to her determined bosom. With renewed faith and confidence, and with reliance on her unusually keen sense concerning dramatic literature, he applies himself to his playwrighting, putting up with his drab job and her smothering attentions with tolerant but temporary resignation. Once focused, those attentions apply themselves with persistent perseverance to achieving recognition for her docile protege.

As recognition approaches, docility changes to impatience, then to resentment, and finally to a stubborn refusal to acknowledge any debt at all to the pathetic figure who actually brought it all about.

Mr. Van Druten portrays the irrationality of human emotions and behavior vividly, fascinating. Complex thoughts, chains of thought, causes and effects—all those things that puzzle and defeat one when one is in the midst of experiencing them—seem to smooth themselves into logical description, if not explanation, in terms of the English language when this author applies his unique abilities to them.

Be it said then that "And Then You Wish" is one of the most pleasantly stimulating books that this reviewer has had the pleasure of reading.

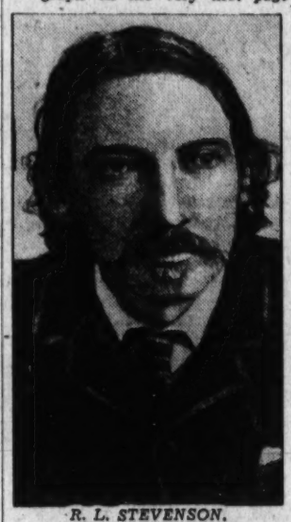
TAKE her book upon your knee, open it to the very first paragraph on the very first page and you'll see what we mean. Here is a childhood memory—nothing remarkable—but look how it sparkles: "My Aunt's dining room was a fascinating place. The window blinds were made of some glossy material with gorgeous paintings on them of scenes in Holland, canals and boats and windmills. Very interesting to look at while eating cake. The sideboard was of shiny mahogany where glittering old silver caught the light. On a what-not in a corner were some attractive ornaments. A ship in a glass bottle and a paper weight that snowed inside if you shook it. On the walls were dark family portraits and little silhouettes in gold frames."

Yes, all of these enchanting things had their being in no less a place than Indianapolis, U. S. A., and even years before Robert Louis Stevenson appeared on the scene. We insist on making this point because we don't want to give you a chance later on to say that, of course, anybody living in as unusual a place as Vailima or Grez or Honolulu could have written an unusual book.



R. L. STEVENSON.

* * * *

STARTING from this point you are due to pick up a lot of Stevensoniana. The Vailima days, following hot-foot on Hawaii, are crammed with it. 'Way back yonder in 1902, a little volume appeared in the bookstore windows with the title "Memories of Vailima," authored by Mrs. Field and her brother, Lloyd.

If you burn candles before R. L. S., you may be interested to know that he once said of a poem written by Browning, "I'm damned if I know what it means. It reads like cat's meat to me." That he always began writing at dawn after drinking a cup of tea brought to him by his Samoan servant, Sosimo. That when he was dictating a story to Mrs. Field, he became so engrossed that he actually took on the attributes of each character. That he said of "Wier of Hermiston," "I see it unfold before me without a break to the end. It will be the best thing I have ever done." That he was once about to scold a bell boy in an Australian hotel, but didn't when he discovered that the culprit was reading "Treasure Island." That on the day before he died he wrote these words: "When the day returns, call us up with morning faces and with morning hearts, eager to labor, happy, if happiness be our portion, and if the day be marked for sorrow, strong to endure it."

In spite of the fact that Stevenson filled so large a part of them, Mrs. Field's account of the Samoan period comes almost as an anticlimax to the chapters on her life in Hawaii. And once in a while you may have the ungracious feeling that Stevenson at Vailima is too much the center of a too adoring household.

One thing though is certain. If you're the person we think you are, you won't miss reading this first-rate book.

Willet Praises Relief Outlays By Other Cities

Problem Is Governmental, Head of Community Chest Asserts.

"Relief is primarily a governmental function, and other cities, where the people are in control, handle it this way," Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Community Chest, asserted last night in a radio address.

The purpose of his talk was to tell why the Chest cannot help the 3,000 employables in the District who can find no work and are in desperate straits. He spoke on Joseph D. Kaufman's program over WMAL, and his statements were in answer to questions put him by Kaufman.

"There are 3,000 employables in the District who can get neither work nor help," said Willett.

Represent 10,000.

"They represent dependents who, with themselves, number approximately 10,000 persons. Many of their dependents are children, ranging from infants to youngsters of school age.

"Because they are employable, the Board of Public Welfare cannot assist them, and the WPA rolls are full. * * *"

"In Baltimore, Buffalo, Cincinnati and Cleveland, for instance," Willett said, "all cities comparable with Washington, no family is denied public relief because some one in that family is employable.

"In Baltimore, a city about one-third larger, relief expenditures in December were twice those of Washington, and more than twice as many people were helped."

Cites Other Expenditures.

"In both Buffalo and Cincinnati approximately three times as much was spent and approximately three times as many people were helped. In Cleveland, which is only 50 per cent larger than Washington, more than four and one-half times as much money was spent for public relief and more than five times as many people helped."

When Willett was asked why some of the money raised by the Chest last November can not be used to help the employables, he stated:

"The Community Chest raised 88 per cent of its goal of $1,969,000. Every dollar of that goal was needed honestly."

Senate Group Backs Copeland Act Change

By the Associated Press.

A Senate sub-committee headed by Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, yesterday approved a proposal to relax the continuous discharge book provisions of the Copeland safety-at-sea act.

The proposal, which has passed the House, would permit seamen to deposit their continuous discharge books with the Department of Commerce rather than to carry them on their persons.

Some seamen said if they were required to carry a book showing their complete record of service it would be used for "blacklisting."

Col. Gallagher Dead; Veteran Of Four Wars

Rites to Be Held Tomorrow in Hospital Chapel at Walter Reed.

Col. Hugh J. Gallagher, 75, retired, who served through four wars and was chief quartermaster in Siberia during the World War, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital, after several weeks' illness. He had lived here since 1933, making his home at 2311 Connecticut avenue.

Col. Gallagher was one of the Army's best known figures; he had served in the Indian wars, the Spanish War, the Boxer Rebellion and the World War. At the time of the volcanic eruption on the island of Martinique in 1902, he was selected to head the American expedition for the relief of victims. He participated in the battle of San Juan Hill, in the Spanish-American War, and earlier had seen active service against Indians. Later he was with the American forces that assisted in the suppression of the Boxer Rebellion and the capture of Peking, China.

A native of Ontario, Canada, he was appointed to the Military Academy in 1880 from Iowa. Upon graduation, he was commissioned a second lieutenant of Cavalry. He served with the Cavalry at various frontier posts. Soon after the outbreak of the Spanish-American War he was sent to Cuba as chief commissary in Gen. Shafter's expedition.

When the first General Staff eligible list was formed, soon after the war, he was one of 45 outstanding officers included in the list. Subsequently, he served as a member of the General Staff. Later, while on duty in the Philippines, he was sent by Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood to Australia and New Zealand to purchase supplies for American troops in the Philippines. At the beginning of the construction of the Panama Canal Col. Gallagher served as purchasing agent.

He was the recipient of official commendation from France and military decorations from Japan and Czechoslovakia. While in charge of the Quartermaster section of the Army base at Brooklyn, N. Y., he was retired, in 1925.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at the chapel at Walter Reed Hospital at 10 a. m., with requiem mass conducted by Chaplain Patrick J. Ryan, U. S. A., and Capt. E. A. Duff, chief of chaplains, U. S. A. Interment will be in Arlington Cemetery.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Amelia P. Gallagher, of Washington; two sons, Hugh Gallagher, of San Francisco, and Capt. Philip E. Gallagher, U. S. A., Fort Leavenworth, Kans.; two daughters, Mrs. A. E. Watson, wife of Admiral Watson, of 2335 Ashmead place northwest, and Miss Mary Lee Gallagher, of 2311 Connecticut avenue, and one granddaughter, Mrs. Alexander C. Liggett, of 1920 Twenty-third street northwest.

Caffery Leaves.

Jefferson Caffery, Ambassador to Cuba, left yesterday for New Orleans, his home. The envoy is on leave from his post. Unconfirmed reports have circulated that at the end of his vacation he may be transferred to a South American capital.

Soldier Dies

COL. HUGH J. GALLAGHER.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Pi no recital by Sigismond Stojowski in Hotel Willard ballroom uesday night. Program: Prelude and Fugue in A minor (Bach-Liszt), Andante in F major (Beethoven), "Carnaval" (Schumann), Ballade in F major, Mazurek in C sharp minor, Op. 41; Nocturne in D flat, Etude in A minor, Op. 25, No. 11 (Chopin), "Theme Cracovien Varie" (Stojowski), "Legende" (Paderewski), "Magyar Rap dia" No. 2 (Liszt).

In the playing of Sigismond Stojowski are echoes of tradition and reflections of the grand style that prevailed when there were heroes of the keyboard. Under his hands the instrument speaks with a bravura eloquence, and only occasionally sings with lyric sweetness. His technique reminds one of Paderewski's and he has that master's proclivity toward thunderous chords and tempestuous rushings of sound. Nor does the resemblance stop there, for he also, in moments of excited speed, does not mind dropping a few notes or letting a finger strike the wrong key now and then.

He has a singing tone that carries a dulcet timbre in the statement of themes, as in the "Andante Favori" of Beethoven and the opening of Chopin's F major Ballade. But he is easily carried away by a poetic fervor of interpretation, and once the afflatus is upon him, the niceties of tonal shading are forgotten. In stormy passages the melodic lines are blurred as by driving rain.

On the technical side there were many moments of masterly performance, as in the Liszt transcription of the organ fugue and in the "Winter Wind" etude of Chopin. His reading of Schumann's "Carnaval" was infused with impetuous romanticism and the spirit of high revel, although one would have liked a more delicate treatment of certain episodes, such as "Chiarina" and "Aveu."

For this listener, his most satisfactory work was done in the Chopin group, which he supplemented with three extra numbers. The bitter portions of the F major Ballade were played with an appropriate fierceness.

Adm. Hobson, Santiago Hero, Is Dead at 66

Naval Officer Who Nearly Bottled Spanish Fleet Victim of Heart Attack.

lifeboat, and they clung to its sides until picked up by the enemy.

Hobson and his men were prisoners of war. The gallant Admiral Cervera dispatched an aide to Commodore Sampson commending the party's bravery and assuring him that all were safe. News of the feat was carried throughout the world.

Five weeks later Hobson and his men were exchanged for a Spanish lieutenant and 14 enlisted men, the prisoner deal being engineered by Col. John Jacob Astor. Upon his return to the United States, Hobson received ovations wherever he went.

He resigned from the service in February, 1903. Thirty years later President Roosevelt presented him with the Congressional Medal of Honor for "extraordinary courage and intrepidity at the risk of his life."

The following year he was commissioned naval constructor and placed on the retired list with the rank of rear admiral.

He was born in Greensboro, Ala., on August 17, 1870, son of James Marcellus and Sarah Croom (Pearson) Hobson. On his father's side he was a descendant of the English naval officer, Admiral Hobson, who planted the British flag in New Zealand in the seventeenth century.

Went to Southern University.

After attending private schools and Southern University at Greensboro, he entered the U. S. Naval Academy and was graduated in 1889. He was ordered to European waters. Hardly had he returned to the United States when he was honored with selection, along with a small group of officers, for study at the Royal Naval College, Woolwich.

After three years in England and on the Continent, where he devoted himself particularly to the study of naval architecture, Hobson was assigned to the Navy Department in Washington.

During the interval from this point until his Santiago exploit he served successively on the flagship New York, at the New York Navy Yard, at Newport News on battleship construction and as the organizer and instructor of a postgraduate course for officers going into the Construction Corps.

On May 25, 1905, Hobson married Grizelda Houston Hull, of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., who survives him with three children. They are Richmond P., Lucia and George.

Resigning from the Navy in 1903 to enter politics, he was a Presidential elector at large from Alabama in 1904 and subsequently was elected to the Sixtieth to Sixty-third Congresses, inclusive (1907-1915).

He was an industrious lecturer and author on American naval supremacy, world peace and the evils of narcotics and strong drink. In 1923 he organized and became president of the International Narcotic Education Association. Three years later he founded the World Conference on Narcotic Education, of which he was secretary general and board chairman at the time of his death.

He founded the World Narcotic Defense Association in 1927 and the Constitutional Democracy Association in 1935, serving both as president.

At the age of 24 he wrote a book which, he claimed, forecast the World War. His succeeding volumes and articles ranged in subject matter from his version of the sinking of the Merrimac and ship construction to "Buck Jones at Annapolis," the evils of alcohol and opium and naval preparedness.

His heroic deed at Santiago remained fresh in the public's memory for many years and the consequent adulation was often trying to the Alabaman. When Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his family moved to England in 1935 to escape publicity, Admiral Hobson observed that "one of the basic evils of hero worship is its effect on a private career."

Probably the most-kissed man of his generation, Admiral Hobson once said:

"They dragged me off trains in the middle of the night to make speeches, and young mothers ambushed me because they wanted their infants to 'touch the admiral's sleeve.'"

Iceland Is Chosen Ocean Air Station

Reykjavik, Iceland, March 16 (AP). Negotiations between Pan-American Airways and Iceland for a renewed concession for an air station here on the proposed transatlantic commercial air route were concluded yesterday.

It was stated the American company proposed to make a trial flight between Iceland and the European continent this summer with a regular biweekly service promised for next year.

The next extension, it was said, was scheduled by 1939 or 1940, with a trial flight between Iceland and the United States.

Regular transatlantic flying between the United States and Europe, vice Iceland, is scheduled for 1942, it was added.

Sir Austen Chamberlain Dies; Helped to Frame Locarno Pact

of climax and anti-climax, the tragedy of a man whose personal power in the House of Commons was unequalled but who failed on two distinct occasions to attain the goal of his life—when it was almost within his grasp.

To the end, however, he accepted his fortunes without trace of bitterness, unless his biting censure of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin's defense co-ordination plan in Commons in February, 1936, could be called such a betrayal. Chamberlain's friends insisted the attack was motivated only by idealism and conscious conviction.

Born in Birmingham October 16, 1863, son of the famed Joseph C. Chamberlain of tariff reform and half-brother of Neville Chamberlain, Joseph Austen Chamberlain was the victim of his own virtues.

He had—as British statesmen are reckoned—little originality and he saw no visions. He was zealous to do his job properly and had a severe code of honor.

His first chance of becoming leader of the Conservatives and Prime Minister of England glimmered and faded in 1906 when Balfour, bowing to the Protectionists, resigned and the choice of his successor seemed to lay between Chancellor of the Exchequer Austen Chamberlain and Walter Long.

There was a deadlock and Bonar Law, canny Scot, was selected as a compromise.

Chamberlain had remained too firm in his party loyalty.

Again in 1922 his star beckoned again, and again his unswerving code of loyalty robbed him of the premiership.

Law, ably assisted by a young man by the name of Stanley Baldwin, challenged the leadership of Lloyd George David in a fiery speech at the Carlton Club. Chamberlain, along with Lord Birkenhead and other true Conservatives, remained firmly true to "L. L. G." Bonar Law, who pushed Chamberlain aside to become party leader, now became prime minister.

But for his loyalty to Lloyd George—and he must have known that "L. L. G.'s" fortunes were declining—Chamberlain would have automatically succeeded to the Conservative leadership and then to the premiership when, a few months later, ill health forced Law out and Baldwin moved into No. 10 Downing street.

These were the great disappointments of Chamberlain's life.

But to the end there was no gloom or dejection about the man as he held his place of "head prefect" among the Conservative backbenchers of Parliament.

He had an Old World poise, rigid with dignity.

Stepping along with more spring in his gait than most men of his age, his hair carefully parted down the left and more than likely wearing a silk topper, Chamberlain was a proud man. Devoted to his father he even copied the senior Chamberlain. He wore a monocle in the same fashion, sported an orchid in his button hole and used only the choicest of the King's English.

But where his father was simple and direct with a bitter tongue for enemies and a hail-fellow-well-met manner with his friends, Austen was always suave, courteous and considerate.

Possessor of a formidable attitude, he did everything in the grand manner. In the House of Commons he never lashed out. Instead he would "venture to suggest" or be "compelled reluctantly to express the view." There were all the verbal clinches of British politics.

Monocle World Famous.

His monocle delighted the caricaturists and, as one of his friends once remarked:

"That monocle is a great protection for Sir Austen. It fortifies a lizard-like state with which he repels too familiar advances."

His clothes were of the finest tailoring, quietly bespeaking the same conservatism of his politics. In 1933 a symposium of tailors in New York, London and Hollywood rated him seventh among the world's best-dressed men.

As to his dignity. Only once was he known to have relaxed it. That was during a Zeppelin raid on London during the war and in his excited curiosity he climbed a lamp post to get a better view. A photographer snapped him and the acrobatic scene appeared with a caption, "Amazing!"

Sir Austen, who was made a Knight of the Garter in 1925 for his work in framing the Locarno Treaty, wanted to be remembered in political history, not as a successful champion of tariff reform in fulfillment of his father's dreams, but as the author of Locarno.

But, although he was secretary of foreign affairs at the time, he was not the actual author of the pact, nor was he even the chief negotiator.

Nevertheless, he will remain one of its greatest champions, for throughout the years as attack after attack was directed against this treaty designed to enable post-war rehabilitation he stood staunchly by it.

There were times when he was forced to defend himself against charges that he was under the hypnotic influence of that astute Frenchman, M. Briand, and that he had been won over to Briand's views by the latter's praise of Chamberlain's French accent. It was true that Sir Austen probably spoke more fluent French than any other British statesman.

The offices which Sir Austen held in the British government were civil lord of the admiralty, financial secretary of the treasury, privy councilor, postmaster general, chancellor of the exchequer, secretary of state for India, member of the war cabinet, lord privy seal and leader of Commons, secretary of foreign affairs, deputy leader of Commons and first lord of the admiralty.

Quit Admiralty in 1931.

He resigned the admiralty post in October, 1931, and became the "prefect" of the government backbenchers in the House of Commons.

It was in his term as foreign secretary in the second Baldwin administration that he played his greatest role, helping with the Locarno Treaty and sponsoring the less fortunate Anglo-French naval agreement. There were many "informal conversations" with Germany and Allied powers in an effort to solve post-war problems.

He fell when the Laborites took over the government in 1929, but returned as first lord of the admiralty at Baldwin's invitation in August, 1931. Two months later he wrote a letter to Baldwin from Birmingham, resigning his office and leaving it at the disposal of the prime minister "to reward the services of some younger man."

The post went to Sir Eyres Monsell, later Viscount Monsell, and Chamberlain went back to his seat in the House of Commons.

Chamberlian heard politics preached by his father at the breakfast table and had these lessons amplified by courses in political science at Rugby, Cambridge, in Berlin and at the Ecole des Sciences Politique in Paris.

He was elected to Commons in 1891, when he was 28.

Chamberlain represented the division of East Worcestershire, Birmingham, in Commons until 1914, when he was elected from Birmingham after a change in district boundaries.

tailed to two industrial plants. A taxi was burned in a renewal of violence attending the 12-day strike of cab drivers.

A walkout of chauffeurs left Toledo, Ohio, virtually without taxicab service. Approximately 200 struck at the Miller cereal mills in Omaha, Nebr. The Johnston Tin Foil & Metal Co. in St. Louis and the Best Manufacturing Co. in Irvington, N. J., closed their doors. The management of both firms said they were motivated by the activities of C. I. O. unionists.

Workers' representatives conferred with officials of the I. Lewis Cigar Manufacturing Co. in Newark in an effort to end New Jersey's first major "sit-down" strike. C. I. O. representatives also held their first parley with spokesmen for the strike-closed Lebanon, Pa., plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. announced its workers would receive $950,000 in bonuses during March.

Several Strikes Ended.

Pay-adjustments settled strikes involving 900 at the Illinois Watch Case Co., Elgin, Ill.; 600 moving-van drivers at Cleveland, 300 Cohoes, N. Y., Rolling Mills employes, and 85 at the Marquardt Cement Co., De Kalb, Ill.

Approximately 100 sit-down strikers, carrying American flags, ended their 15-day occupation of the Aladdin Industries plant at Alexandria, Ind., but leaders announced they would continue the strike from the outside.

At Philadelphia, 500 striking garbage collectors sought to return to work, but were denied re-employment.

Strikes continued at five 5 and 10 stores in Brooklyn and New York and at 23 Brooklyn laundries.

Pay increases included a 5 per cent increase for 30,000 employes of the International Shoe Co.; 80 cents a day for about 12,000 of three Silica brick firms at Mount Union, Pa.; 5 per cent for 4,500 at the Mohawk Carpet Mills, Amsterdam, N. Y.; 8 cents an hour for 2,000 at the Kansas City (Mo.) Power & Light Co.; 5 to 7 per cent for 600 at the Collyer Insulated Wire Co. plants in Rhode Island; 13 cents an hour for 200 at the Ashland, Ky., By-Products Coke Co. Other raises benefited 4,000 at the Corn Products Refining Co. units in Chicago, Argo and Pekin, Ill.; North Kansas City, Mo., and Edgewater, N. J., and 500 at the American Zinc Co.'s East St. Louis, Ill., plant.

Retrial of Rhodes Set for April 12

Fred B. Rhodes, former president of the closed Fidelity Building and Loan Association, will be retried in District Court April 12 on a charge of forging a withdrawal slip for $1,500 on the account of Desire A. Irr, a depositor in the association.

Rhodes was tried recently, but a mistrial was declared when the jurors reported they were in hopeless disagreement.

The Government charged Rhodes had forged the name of Irr to the slip. Rhodes claimed he had authority from Irr to make the withdrawal. Irr, called as a rebuttal witness, said he did not understand he had given Rhodes carte blanche authority to make use of his funds. Twenty-three other charges are pending against Rhodes.

5 Rebel Planes Shot Down by Loyal Airmen

760 Bombs Dropped on Lines of Insurgents in Air Offensive.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, March 16.—Fifty Government planes, in a mass offensive against insurgent-held Brihuega dropped 760 bombs in a daring aerial battle today, Madrid defense officials announced.

Five insurgent planes were shot down and one government plane crashed in the battle over the sector 44 miles northeast of Madrid. Insurgent ground losses in the Brihuega area were said to have been heavy.

There were aerial duels at many other points in the northeastern sector.

Government reports said Madrid's planes dropped 100 bombs and fired 3,000 machine gun bullets at insurgent positions near Ledanca and Almadrones, northeast of Guadalajara.

Insurgent raiding planes bombed Alcala de Henares, 20 miles northeast of Madrid, Guadalajara and even Madrid itself. In a dogfight at Alcala de Henares, two insurgent ships which were shot down were found to be of Italian manufacture, the Madrid defense command said.

At Canillejas, 5 miles north of Madrid, ten persons were reported killed and 36 injured by insurgent bombs.

Far to the east, five insurgent craft bombed the port of Barcelona, killing at least seven persons and injuring 34. The planes dropped 100 and 200-pound bombs, one exploding near the prow of a French warship.

Tibbs and Louisa Vaughn Jones, revealed a fine resonant quality of voice and a stage presence and maner indicative of training.

Minnesotan Calls Act Aid to Fascism; Hero Sees Peace in Measure.

legislation, Hitler, Mussolini and their gangster accomplices in Lisbon and Tokyo are free to purchase here all the supplies they need."

Only a few minutes before, Edouard Victor Michel Izac (Democrat), California, Iowa-born Annapolis graduate, who went down with the submarine-sunk President Lincoln, was captured, spent 12 days in a German submarine and received a Congressional Medal of Honor for his dramatic escape from a German prison camp, had said:

"If we adopt this neutrality legislation as a continuing policy of Government; if we add to it legislation removing profits in war time, and if we keep our Navy in our own waters, it will not be necessary to sacrifice the lives of Americans in another foreign war."

Bernard was the lone member of both houses of Congress to vote "No" on the Administration resolution banning arms shipments to Spain when that measure was whipped through the chambers in the early days of this session.

Assails Both Bills.

Yesterday, in an address that was received without applause, Bernard blasted both the Pittman and McReynolds bills as "lumping together the robber and the robbed, the murderer and the murdered, with no distinction between aggressor nations and their victims." Then he said of his lone vote against the arms bar to Spain bill:

"I am proud of that vote. It has been acknowledged by freedom lovers all over the world. The facts show that the passage of that resolution not only deprived a sorely pressed, a literally bleeding people of arms for their self-defense, but also encouraged the Nazi-Mussolini governments to think they have the approval of the American Government."

He then rehearsed the entire history of the LaGuardia-Hitler incident, in which the New York Mayor's reference to Hitler as "a brown-shirted fanatic" brought what Bernard called "an unprecedented outburst of the Nazi press against the American people as a group and against LaGuardia and American womanhood in particular."

He said: "Der Angriff, a German newspaper, called LaGuardia, who was once a distinguished member of this gody, a New York gangster, an underworld character, a blackmailer, a man with cheap-joint brains, an impertinent Jewish lout, a filthy character and unprintable things.

"The 1,200 American women who listened to the mayor were characterized as prostitutes."

"The Nazis threatened that if we should insist on expressing our hearty dislike for a gang of Fascist ruffians, gangsters and murderers, we'd better look out.

"This shows that failure to recognize aggression, and instituting an arms boycott against an invaded people encourages the Fascists.

"The American people clearly showed their anti-Fascist sentiments when they rejected Landon and his Liberty League and his union-busting backers."

Criticizes McReynolds.

Bernard violently criticized Chairman Sam D. McReynolds, of Tennessee, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, for his action in asserting that Social Security Board union members who protested the bills as "pro-Fascist" should "be fired." Bernard said:

"Mr. McReynolds would like to establish, in Hitler fashion, a class of secondary American citizens."

Izac, 46, prematurely gray, is the lone member of Congress to wear the blue button significant of his ownership of the Congressional Medal of Honor. When his boat, the President Lincoln, was torpedoed 400 miles off the French coast on May 31, 1918, Izac was captured by the raiding submarine. By observing the daily chart readings during the 12 days he spent on the submarine, he discovered how the German submarines were avoiding the North Sea mine blockade at Heligoland by traversing the Baltic Sea to dock near Copenhagen. He was interned at Villingen, Germany, after two attempts to escape, one of which ended when a guard broke a rifle-butt on his head and the other when he injured his knees in jumping from a speeding train.

Finally escaping from Villingen through a mile of barbed-wire, he traversed successfully the 120 miles to the Rhine in seven nights of travel through the woods, swam the Rhine, and hurried to London with his information.

Izac's maiden speech, he told the House, had been withheld from debate over the Navy appropriations bill because "I was especially anxious that my first words on the floor of the House should be uttered in the interests of peace, although last week I listened with impatience to some of the most misleading statements on our Navy that have ever been made in Congress.

"The maintenance of an adequate Navy is a tremendous price to pay for peace, but I see no other way as long as other nations build up their military and naval strength and become potential aggressors against our shores."

After the second reading of the bill, the measure was set for consideration Thursday, when passage is possible.

Spanish Diplomat Here Asks U. S. Embargo Against Italy

Stating the presence of four Black Shirt divisions near Guadalajara constituted "a flagrant act of undeclared war" upon Spain, Senor Enrique de la Casa, first secretary of the Spanish Legation, yesterday declared the United States should, under the neutrality bill, impose an embargo upon Italy.

"Italy has invaded Spain without a previous declaration of war," he said. "The United States, as the author of the Kellogg Pact, therefore should brand her as an aggressor."

The embassy, de la Casa said, does not expect an answer to the note it delivered the State Department Monday giving complete details of the composition of the Italian army corps fighting the Spanish government. "We cannot demand action on the matter," he explained. "The Spanish republic merely appeals to the conscience of this Government and all nations which are convinced of the necessity for a minimum of justice and desire to bridle the unruliness of some governments who have adopted outrage and violence as their policy in international relations."

"Italy," the secretary continued, "is adopting the same tactics she pursued in Ethiopia. In Spain, however, she shall find out soon enough she has not helpless natives to contend with but a people's army that has proved it can courageously fight to the very death for an ideal."

Ambassador de los Rios, in his note to the State Department, pointed out "the grave character of this procedure by Italy; the nullifying effect on the juridical norms in international life and the moral wrecking of that institution which was created by more than 50 nations for their mutual security; an institution which is suffering from muteness."

Those governments, the envoy contended, "acquire a historical character as public enemies of universal peace when using such policies."

Bob Burns Says

Copyright, 1937

By Bob Burns.

Almost every time I ride on a train through a farm section or through a small village, I hear some city people say how terrible it must be to have to live in a place like that.

I don't blame the city people because they just don't know no better. They don't know that under those roofs live the happiest families in the world. They really git to know and love each other. In the daytime, they're workin' shoulder to shoulder in the field and at night, they're all gathered around the fireside. In the city, there are too many things to divide the family interest. I know a city lady that lost her husband and the preacher comes there to console her. He said, "Madam, your husband had many wonderful qualities," and she said, "Well, now, you know, I'm beginning to believe that, myself—so many people have told me so." She said, "I never had a chance to get very well acquainted with him—he belonged to seven lodges and three clubs.

THE FEDERAL DIARY

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Note on Motherhood

Farmer Carl Rogers, who lives near Clarksburg, W. Va., was impressed, and he told The Washington Post's Clarksburg correspondent, who said he'd put it in the paper. And so, when two brief paragraphs reached the paper, they were taken over to the Government's animal husbandry department and a press bureau man there said he was impressed, even if he couldn't qualify personally as an authority on the motherhood of sows.

By way of convenient coincidence, serious Dr. W. A. Craft, principal animal husbandryman, walked in, was handed the two paragraphs, adjusted his steel-rimmed spectacles, took a seat and became interested. There was silence—everyone waiting to learn whether the expert would be impressed.

"I congratulate the sow," said Dr. Craft. He then read aloud the two paragraphs:

"A sow 4 years old and owned by Carl Rogers, Brown farmer, knows nothing of the agitation for birth control, as is shown by her record the last 12 months.

"Her seventh litter, coming this week, contained 16 pigs, making her total 51 in 12 months, Rogers said. She has farrowed a total of 97 pigs, with an average litter of 13.5."

"Worthy, indeed, of congratulations," said Dr. Craft. "But the record should be checked." J. H. Zeller, of the doctor's office, went in the file cases. "There is a sow at the Beltsville experiment farm that produced three litters in one week over a year . . . The three litters totaled 48 pigs . . . But the best record is of an English sow that produced, in her lifetime, 20 litters that gave a total of 367 pigs, and there are others, such as . . ."

"No need to catalogue it all," said the press bureau man . . . "I'm sufficiently impressed and Dr. Craft is impressed . . ." "Oh, yes," said Dr. Craft, "the sow is undoubtedly a subject for congratulation."

Note on Fatherhood

Sooner or later—maybe already—the searching fingers of Washington's government are going to feel this case out, so the Government might as well hear something about it now. The Post's correspondent at Kingwood, W. Va., sent the tidings, as follows:

"A man with 24 sons is seeking old-age relief from the Preston County Public Assistance Council . . . Questioned about his dependents, the man said he has 24 living sons, but does not know the address of any of them . . . He said that he was living with his seventh wife."

Rambling Writing:

While the Government is either doing—or is plotting and planning to do—a lot of overhauling and reorganizing and refitting of this building or unfitting of that one, why doesn't the Government give Agricultural Department at least one big room to house its scientific exhibits? As many interesting experiments . . . which result in exhibits . . . are conducted by this department as any other in the Government's system . . . At present, dozens of offices keep their own exhibits . . . Some in glass cases, some on the walls . . . Secretary Wallace is said to be very favorable to such a project . . . Someone writes in that "Cupid has handed down a decision against Uncle Sam in favor of a member of the legal fraternity of the District of Columbia . . . The bride-to-be is employed in the Veterans' Administration and the prospective bridegroom has offices in the Evans Building . . . The rumor says next week" . . . Definitely gone for a time: Those early brave flowers, by a Foutreenth street Government building, which gambled with early March and lost to the snow . . . Those boys who tried to sail their kites in the park by the Washington Monument . . . They gave up the kites for sleds . . . This subtle comment in the Social Security Board's "Union Review: "The need for a career service in the Administration of our social security program must indeed be great, since it has been indorsed by even the United States Chamber of Commerce."

The Civil Service Committee's report on hours and duties has brought from some Government employes the view that no more will non-Government workers refer to Government employes as "pampered" . . . The report, they say, is "hardly surprising to the average Government employe".

68 Captured In New Police Gaming Raid

Officers Crash Way Into Four Places; Two Are Found Empty.

Lookout Forced to Lead Raiders Through Hidden Passage.

Continuing last week's drive against gambling establishments, police yesterday smashed their way into four alleged race betting places, seized 68 men and several truck loads of equipment.

The raids yesterday were staged "to gather in the loose ends" of last week's attack which nearly failed following a tip-off which is still being investigated. The four places are those which escaped police last week when the raiders were called back.

Striking simultaneously, the police entered a downtown office building, a downtown hotel, 2503 Champlain street northwest and 1007-9 Ninth street northwest shortly before 4 p. m.

Twelve barred doors confronted 14 policemen led by Lieuts. Oscar J. Letterman and Thomas Mason, jr., when they entered the Ninth street place. After surrounding the building, at a given signal the men advanced.

A lookout man with a key to the barred, steel-inforced doors was quickly taken into custody and forced to lead the way through the intricate system of doors leading from 1107 to the second and third floors of the building next door.

One of the most elaborate gambling establishments ever uncovered confronted the officers. Blackboards covered the walls, overstuffed furniture was present for the comfort of customers. All sorts of gambling paraphernalia and a "Telecast" loud-speaker set was confiscated.

When the police entered, the place was thrown into an uproar. Five men, including Carroll (Knubby) Nuchols, fled to the roof, but were captured and returned to the building.

Taken to the Fourth Precinct station, none of the men had been put under charges last night. Nuchols was one of four men charged with setting up a gaming table after raids on 14 gaming places last week.

Seven men and a woman were seized with much alleged race-betting equipment when another squad of men entered the Champlain street address. These were taken to the Third Precinct station and later transferred to the Detective Bureau, where they were fingerprinted and photographed.

The other raids were unsuccessful. In the office building, Inspector Maurice Collins and eight men entered through a rear door in the basement, but the place had been vacated.

Race horse slips, run-down sheets and tables and chairs were found, with several telephones. Lieut. Floyd Truscott, whose planning led to the drive against gambling, said the place apparently had not been occupied since last week.

In the hotel the raiders found nothing. Entering a room which was scheduled to be raided last week, the raiders found no one and no equipment. Police said that whoever was using the place before had moved out.

Six Are Held.

Of those taken to headquarters six were held on charges of conspiring to violate the gambling laws of the District and with permitting gaming.

Men held on the double charge are Harry Davis, of 1239 Tenth street northwest; Robert A. Murray, 1018 Fourteenth street northwest; John W. Clark, of 1357 Monroe street northwest; Max Wolf, of 459 M street northwest; Paul A. Davis, of 1239 Tenth street northwest, and Guy G. Glenn, of 1018 Fourteenth street northwest. All were released in $2,000 bond.

Two other men, previously charged with conspiracy, were charged with violating the gaming laws. They are Moe Morganstein, of 1335 Park road northwest, and Carroll (Nubby) Nuckols, of 1636 Connecticut avenue northwest.

James Norfleet, 2503 Champlain street northwest, was charged with conspiracy to violate the gaming laws. All others taken in the Champlain street raid were released.

Thomas Clyde Will Leaves $1,500,000

Thomas Clyde, son of the founder of the Clyde-Mallory Steamship Lines, left an estate valued at $1,500,000, it was learned in District Court yesterday when a petition for the probate of his will was filed.

The largest provision of the will directed that some $200,000 be set aside for the benefit of the Clyde Pension and Gartuity Fund which was set up in 1931 by the members of the Clyde family.

Mr. Clyde asked that his former secretary, May A. Sheehan, of Philadelphia, Pa., be allowed to draw up to $50,000 a year to pay to those most deserving among the persons formerly supported by Mr. Clyde. A. G. Westor, Robert Mitchell, and Mrs. Ida Johnston, all are to receive $15,000 each, and whatever is left in the estate is to be shared by May Sheehan, Francis L. Durk, Arthur Gunther, George V. McLaughlin, John Gemmell, jr., and Cornelius T. Regan.

New Method of Lighting Introduced at Jelleff's

New intense lamps are used in throwing the colored spotlights now illuminating Jelleff's display windows, it was learned yesterday. A new type of glass screen throws soft tinted lights on the clothes models. The colors used are blue, "surprise pink," light straw, light green, very light amber and rose pink.

Jelleff's is the first store in Washington to introduce this form of lighting.

Commissioners Report Against Race Track Bill

House District Committee Expected to Discuss Measure Today.

District day in the House again was postponed by House leaders yesterday from next Monday to March 9, as the Commissioners submitted adverse reports on several local bills.

As the House District Committee still was torn between two divergent points of view on the race-track bill, the Commissioners submitted a formal report opposing it. The measure is expected to come up for discussion at today's committee meeting, but it is unlikely that it may be recalled except with the consent of Chairman Mary T. Norton.

Although Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, had notified committee members he would move to have it recalled, he has learned since that his motion would be out of order if one member of the committee objects.

The decision rests with Mrs. Norton, author of the bill, who engineered the measure through the committee. If she relents, the bill will be recalled for hearings and possible amendment.

The Commissioners also filed formal objections with the committee against the Collins bill to authorize construction of a $2,500,000 main library. Their reason was the lack of money.

They approved a proposal bowling alleys be allowed to open at 2 p. m. Sundays, on the ground that "bowling has become more of a sport than an amusement" and therefore should be given equal rights with other sports.

Other bills rejected by the District heads are:

A proposal to abolish compulsory vaccination of children before they enter the public schools.

Regulation of beauty shops and barber shops by special boards; the authority, they contended, should remain with the health departments.

Reversing their position of last year, the Commissioners recommended that no action be taken on a bill to set up magistrate courts in the District. Court dockets are not congested, they said, and cramped quarters will be eliminated with the completion of a new small court building.

400 Adventists Attend Reception

Seventh-Day Adventist leaders of the world's general conference, with their wives and office employes were given a reception by the officials and employes of the Review and Herald Publishing Association, a publishing house operated by the denomination, at assembly hall of the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire headquarters last night. Approximately 400 attended.

A varied program was presented. There also were chalk talks by T. K. Martin, a musical reading by Miss Ruth Nerlund, and different games. An address of welcome was made by Rev. Walter P. Elliott, general manager, and a response by Rev. J. L. McElhany, president of the general conference.

Fire Regulations Charge.

Nat Rosen, manager of Howard Theater, posted $25 collateral in Police Court yesterday on a charge of violating fire regultaions. According to an inspector from the fire marshal's office, the theater was equipped with several back drops that were not fire-proof.

Formal Dance Tonight.

The Massachusetts Society will give a formal dance and reception tonight at Wardman Park Hotel. Guests of honor will be the Congressional delegation from the Bay State.

Kenneth Hundred Serves Five Years in Maryland; Wanted Elsewhere.

Knneth Meyers Hundred, 33, walked out of the Maryland Penitentiary yesterday, a free man after five years of confinement. Outside he was taken into custody by Washington police.

Under indictment here since 1932 in connection with a series of burglaries, Hundred was arrested by Detective Sergts. Robert Bryant and Thomas Sullivan to be returned here for trial. He waived a removal hearing and agreed to return.

Hundred, alias Hyman Kronick, was originally arrested in New York City after he was traced by means of initials found in a hat after a housebreaking. The hat was traced to a dry cleaning establishment and Hundred's identity became known.

Maryland authorities, however, took Hundred for trial and he was sent to jail for five years. His term expired yesterday and he was returned here.

Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson said Hundred will be questioned in connection with nearly 100 housbreakings and mail box thefts. Thompson also said Hundred is wanted in Frankfort, Ky., and Hinesville, Ga., where he is alleged to have escaped from prison camps.

76 Army Balloons Stolen From Auto Of Capt. Wenstrom

Robbery was a "rising" business for the thief who ransacked the parked automobile of Capt. William H. Wenstrom, of Bolling Field, yesterday.

Capt. Wenstrom told police the thief took 76 Army balloons, in use by the meteorology division of the flying field. There were, he said, 60 16-inch balloons, 12 28-inch balloons and 4 42-inch balloons, all used in making weather tests.

His automobile was parked on Tenth street, between F and G streets, at the time. Police believe the robber did not know just what the balloons were. He also took some private property.

Capital Today Pays Tributes To St. Patrick

Irish War Veterans to Place Wreath on Unknown Soldier's Grave.

With solemn ceremonies and gay banquets and dances, as well as with the traditional wearing of the "green" Washington today will celebrate St. Patrick's Day, honoring the great missionary who made Christians of the Irish in the fifth century, and who has been their patron saint ever since.

District of Columbia Post, No. 17, Irish War Veterans of the United States, will meet this morning at 10 o'clock at the Commodore John Barry Monument in Franklin Park and conduct brief services, led by the National Commander of the Irish Veterans, John Hogan, and District Commander E. J. McGrory.

Later the party will travel to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, in Arlington National Cemetery, where another service will be held and a wreath placed. Representative Michael Stack, of Pennsylvania, will speak and Chaplain Patrick J. Ryan of Walter Reed Hospital, will officiate, as he will at the Barry statue.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians will join with its auxiliary in attending a mass at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception on the campus of Catholic University in the morning, and hold a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel in the evening.

Mgr. David T. O'Dwyer, director of the Shrine, will preach the sermon at mass at 10 o'clock, and the Rev. Timothy N. McCarthy will be in charge of the ceremonies.

The Friendly Sons of St. Patrick will hold a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel tonight, and a St. Patrick's celebration will be held in Gonzaga Hall at 8 o'clock this evening. This program will include a presentation of "The Coiner" by the Blackfriars Guild.

The O'Mahoneys and the McCarrans won't be here today.

Both Senator O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Senator McCarran, of Nevada, will turn their backs on Congress and tell other Sons of Erin what grand people the Irish are.

O'Mahoney is heading for Providence, R. I., to address the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, while McCarran will tell the United Irish Societies of San Francisco about the "new Ireland."

Both are Judiciary Committee members and only the 1444th anniversary of the Irish Patron Saint's death would keep them from the Supreme Court scrap.

Citizens Seek Ban on Buses At Early Hour

Residents of Buchanan Street Say Motors Disturb Sleep.

Petworth Group Approves Plan for Suffrage in District.

Acting on complaints of a number of Buchanan street residents, G. C. Hinckley last night presented a petition to the Petworth Citizens Association asking that a committee be appointed to confer with the Public Utilities Commission or the Capitol Transit Co. on the matter of early morning bus traffic on Buchanan street.

The petition, which was referred to the association's committee on transportation, complained that the buses starting at 6:15 a. m. and going uphill on Buchanan street from Fourteenth street to Eighth street make undue noise and awaken residents. On occasion, it was said, motor vibration has caused ceiling plaster to fall and cracks to form in walls.

Resolving itself into a meeting of independent citizens, after its regular meeting had adjourned, the association adopted a resolution approving a plan, of action, which, if successful, would lead to local suffrage.

The plan was presented by W. S. Finch, of the Burroughs Citizens Association, chairman of the joint committee on local suffrage.

Debate Court Plan.

After the business session, D. C. Colladay and P. C. King, jr., both of the District Junior Bar Association, debated President Roosevelt's plan for reorganizing the Supreme Court. Colladay took the negative and King the affirmative.

Other action included approval of two resolutions opposing the granting of liquor licenses to two Petworth restaurants.

West End Citizens.

Praise for the articles on social diseases appearing in The Washington Post was voiced in a resolution last night by the West End Citizens' Association, in session at the Kidder School. The resolution also lauded Surgeon Gen. Thomas Parran and District Health Officer George Ruhland.

The group went on record as opposing the Jacobs fiscal report, and requested the appropriation of $15,000 for use in planting trees in Washington.

Opposition to any diversion of the gasoline tax fund for other than improving highways was voted. The association also went on record as favoring additional funds for increasing the Fire Department and replacing equipment as soon as it becomes obsolete.

Sakiko Saito Named Queen Of Blossoms

SAKIKO SAITO.

Flow of Contributions Begins; Night Fete to Be Staged.

Confident that ample funds will be raised to defray costs of a colorful cherry blossom festival this spring, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday selected 10-year-old Sakiko Saito, daughter of the Japanese Ambassador and Mme. Saito, as Queen of the Blossoms.

Already a number of contributions have been made toward the $7,500 fund believed necessary to defray costs of the festival. Commissioner Hazen says he feels sure the festival committee will surpass its $5,000 minimum goal.

Present plans call for the construction of 5,000 seats in East Potomac Park, where the festivities will be staged. Tentative plans call for a night festival at the water gate, a fireworks display and formal crowning of the queen.

Members of a subcommittee on public safety and traffic named yesterday include Police Chief Ernest W. Brown, Inspectors L. I. H. Edwards and Edward J. Kelly, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Park Police Capt. P. J. Carroll.

"If it's anything like a birthday party, I'll like it," said Sakiko last night, adding that she is more at home playing table tennis than on a stage. "I was the servant girl in a play at school once, though," she said.

Sakiko was born in New York when her father was consul general there. She has lived in London, the Netherlands, Japan and Seattle, as well as Washington. Her favorite subject in school is geography. At home she likes best to play with her canary.

For the cherry blossom fete Sakiko will wear Japanese costume, she said.

Barber Shop Inspection Called Lax

D. C. Health Bureau's Staff Too Small, House Unit Told.

Quinn Bill Controversy Stirred by Charge of Labor Head.

Washington barber shops often go uninspected by the Health Department for years ecause of the lack of public health inspectors, a sub-committee of the House District Committee was told yesterday at a hearing on the Quinn bill to regulate local barber shops.

A garbage inspector was called into service to inspect a barber shop, one witness asserted, because the District has but one barber shop inspector.

"Garbage inspection is an honorable profession," remarked Chairman Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, "but a barber shop is not the place for it."

Controversy Develops.

A controversy developed between members of the sub-committee, who favored the bill, and District officials, who opposed it on the ground that the Health Department already had ample authority, but insufficient personnel to conduct regular inspections of barber shops.

Hearings will be resumed next Tuesday, after which the sub-committee will report to the full committee.

The charges of inadequate inspection were made by Philip Gelfe, president of the Journeyman Barbers Union, Local 239.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland admitted that barber shop inspection has not been as thorough as it might have been, but he objected to the proposal to transfer it to a board of barber examiners.

The District Commissioners, through Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, supported Dr. Ruhland in the objection, while explaining that they did not oppose the setting up of qualifications for barbers in Washington.

The danger of syphilitic infection in barber shops was cited by Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, who proposed that medical examination of barbers and inspection of their equipment should be more frequent.

Seal said that a barber suffering from a venereal disease is now barred from practice, but he admitted under questioning that the District has to depend upon a report from the barber himself to the proprietor of the shop.

Disease Cases Found.

Dr. Ruhland admitted that eight cases of syphilis had been discovered in barber shops this year by the barber inspector. He also disclosed that an active case of tuberculosis had been found in the Senate restaurant staff.

The health officer contended, however, that medical examinations are futile as diseases might appear the day after a shop is given a health certificate.

The qualification provisions were objected to by John J. Carmody, who represented two large colored barber shops, on the ground that they would discriminate against untrained colored barbers.

Shamrock Day Features Lead Club Programs

St. Patrick's Entertainment to Hold Sway Tonight at Supper Spots.

By Chanticleer.

It will be St. Patrick's Day at the supper clubs tonight. Maestro Arthur Warren at the Metronome Room of the Wardman Park is laying aside his partiality to a revival of Spanish rhythms to play some real Irish jib numbers. Special orchestrations are being sent to Warren by 'plane from New York for the occasion.

Mel Anderson, vocalist with the band, has been rehearsing Irish numbers for a week now. A shamrock—10 feet high—will be erected behind the bandstand with green balloons and smaller shamrocks as incidental decorations. Also favors.

La Paree's pace is set this week by the Tip Toppers, a bevy of maidens, who contribute no end of liveliness to the festivities. Note one number in particular, the International Dance, in which each gal is dressed to represent a country—Cuba, Holland, France and so on. Donald Douglas, emmcee, and Jean Harlan supply the comedy bits between numbers.

Jimmy Byrd advises all who will listen that he's painfully conscious of a big mistake made over a long period of time. Meaning that he has found his patrons taking to the new 2 o'clock closing time as the proverbial duck to water. It's full steam from now on until 2 a. m., at the Mayfair.

Lester Cole and his eight Whitecaps are wowing 'em at the Shoreham—nine men, strong and true, in a program of nautical songs. Chef Jacques is preparing some of his good French and American dishes to make everybody feel shin-shape at dinner or supper. Of course the floor is a "sea" of dancers when Barnee and his orchestra begin.

Like square dances? Boulevard Farms has inaugurated a regular, bona fide, old-fashioned square dance as a part of the Friday night barn dance. Alice Edwards, the little girl who sings with the band, is leaving for a two weeks' vacation. To Bermuda.

Tania and Kirsoff, the dancers who use snakes in their routines and flip knives at each other, are still headlining things at Cocoanut Grove—raising occasional little squeals from the ladies and gasps from the gentlemen. Ray Back is still vocalizing and Charley Jeeter pours out restful tunes on the electric organ. Emory Daugherty and his orchestra for your dancing. Frank McCormick is the clowning emmcee.

Ireland will be honored tonight by the Ambassador's Hi Hat Hawaiians. Dave Naeole is possibly the only Hawaiian in the world who sings Irish ditties with an acceptable accent. Dick Reger, the singing headliner, and Helen Malcolm, also promise vocal tribute to St. Pat.

The Winstead Trio stars at the Lotus this week—a clever team that began its professional work here in Washington. First as the Three Aces and then with Art Godfrey. Their first night club appearance was at the Lotus. They came back now direct from a run with Ina Ray Hutton. The Elton Trio has been held over by popular demand. Paul Florenz D'Lovables form the dancing ensemble background.

Carr Von Sigler, pianist in Johnny Shaw's Orchestra at the Madrillon, says he can play the new type pipeless organ alright. But adds no musician in town gets enough salary to ever own one! Incidentally, there is a picture of Shaw's "swing group" in the window at Droop's.

Sascha Bartnovsky and his band, at the Russian Troika, should have some sort of anniversary celebration. They're a good aggregation or at least they've been fooling scores of persons if they are not. They've been at the Troika since that memorable opening several years ago. Never have missed a performance. Mischa Markoff, the Troika's emmcee this season, says Sascha's crew is the best he's ever worked with in many years of supper club engagements.

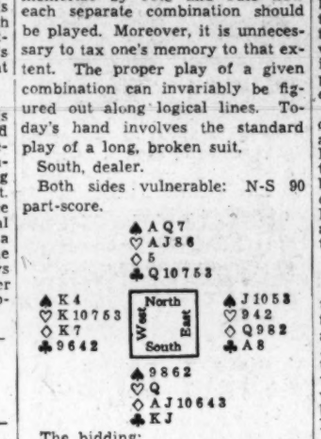
Mrs. Culbertson On Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Considering the almost infinite variety of card combinations, it is out of the question for players to memorize by rote and rule how each separate combination should be played. Moreover, it is unnecessary to tax one's memory to that extent. The proper play of a given combination can invariably be figured out along logical lines. Today's hand involves the standard play of a long, broken suit.

South, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable: N-S 90 part-score.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	1 ♡	Double	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 ◇	Pass	3 N T	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

It was not until South had rebid his diamonds three times that North could be convinced of South's unwillingness to play at notrump. North took entirely the wrong view about South's bidding. He apparently regarded the takeout of the one heart double as an ordinary strength-showing rebid on South's part, when, as a matter of fact, it was an obvious rescue.

West opened the duece of clubs, East won with the Ace, and returned his highest heart. West covered declarer's Queen, and dummy's Ace won. Dummy's lone diamond was now led, and declarer went up with the Ace and returned the Jack. West won with the King, and later East had to be given two trump tricks.

Declarer evidently thought that he was playing the trumps in the safest possible way for two losers, in following the Ace with the Jack, but in reality this was a play which could not gain. Only if the trumps were divided 3-3 or 4-2 could trump losers be held to two; and in the 4-2 bracket this could not be done unless the doubleton included an honor.

To clarify this point, assume that either East or West had started with four diamonds to the King-Queen. The Ace would take one of these, but the Jack would lose to the Queen and the defender's other two cards would still dominate declarer's ten-six.

Thus, since there was nothing to be gained by leading the Jack at the second trick, the play of the Ace should have been followed by a low card. If the trumps were split 3-3, or the second play brought out an honor, only two trump tricks would have to be lost, which is what would have happened in this hand. West's diamond King would not have killed one of South's honors, and on the third trump lead South's proper play of the Jack would have held East to only one additional trump trick.

'King of Jazz' Joins Campaign For Symphony

Whiteman Will Be Guest of Honor at Workers' Luncheon Today.

Campaigners out to raise $110,000 for the National Symphony Orchestra yesterday enlisted the support of Paul Whiteman, who joins his own 40-piece jazz band with Hans Kindler's 80-piece organization in Constitution Hall tonight.

The veteran band leader, to whom the title of dean of modern American music is frequently applied, offered his services at campaign headquarters at the Hay-Adams House—then accepted an invitation to be guest of honor at the third report luncheon for workers at noon today at the Raleigh Hotel.

Whiteman affirmed his enthusiasm for Washington's symphony after his first rehearsal with the combined orchestras, and declared the organization which Kindler established in the Nation's Capital six years ago should be continued as a permanent national institution through wholehearted public support.

Large Turnout Today.

Campaign leaders expect one of the largest report turnouts of the campaign today. They said between 300 and 400 of the corps of workers will be present to greet Whiteman.

At the same time the drive's largest financial report is expected to be turned in. Groups working in the business and governmental divisions will bring in totals exceeding any they have previously reported, their chairmen said yesterday.

The campaign total stood yesterday at nearly $37,000, the amount announced at the second report luncheon Monday. While substantial contributions were announced by nearly every committee in the drive, it was pointed out that soliciting was just getting under way, and that only partial returns were then available.

Morgan Group Meets.

As the campaign passed its one-third way mark, the standings of the several committees Tuesday was as follows: Special gifts, $25,450; Army, $395.52; Navy, $312; associations, $2,055; women's business division, $2,320; men's business division, $3,500; civic, $1,324.50; suburban, $170; Government, $700; Junior League, $93.

The special gifts committee, of which Thomas Morgan, jr., is chairman, met at 5 p. m. yesterday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, 2010 S street northwest, to discuss progress of their section of the campaign and to lay plans for completing their drive for $63,000.

Jerusalem, March 16 (AP).—A Jewish settler in upper Galilee was slain (presumably a continuation of Arab-Jewish conflict) today while entering his home. His was the sixth death there since Saturday.

On the Air Today

Mr. Paul Whiteman, who has been carrying the burden of the title "King of Jazz" on his ample shoulders for lo these many years, is in town. Mr. Whiteman is accustomed to rubbing his jazz-ermined elbows with the more distinguished maestri of the conventional school and tonight joins musical forces with the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall.

So much fuss and ado has been set up in recent years as a result of radio broadcasting favoring the lighter forms of musical expression that it seems reassuring to have Whiteman and Hans Kindler merge forces on the same platform. Whiteman (shall we refer to him now as the dean of modern American music?) has conducted already in New York and Philadelphia in precisely the same role as tonight here. And not long ago he conducted the G. M. concert via N. B. C.

Tonight's concert will be typically Whiteman—contemporary compositions flavored in the Whiteman manner. In his aggregation of 30, augmenting the Kindler forces, will be Casper Reardon, the "swing" harpist; Roy Bargy, pianist; the King's Men and Robert Lawrence, barytone.

To guarantee the conventional concertgoer that this modern music will not be misunderstood, Deems Taylor, commentator of the Sunday afternoon Philharmonic concerts (WJSV), will annotate the program from the platform. He'll dwell on the whys and wherefores of the symphonic jazz to flow over the footlights and a few notes on the composers represented.

Of particular interest to radio listeners will be Van Phillips' "Thank You, Mr. Bach," and "All Points West," by Rodgers and Hart. Both have been presented in broadcasts recently. Ferde Grofe's "Tabloid" and Arnold Deutsch's "Scottish Suite" also have received attention on the air by Whiteman.

No radio listener has overlooked the work of Casper Reardon and his talents will be brought out to their best advantage in "St. Louis Blues." Appropriately enough, the perennially favorite "Rhapsody in Blue," with Bargy as piano soloist, has been selected for the finale.

I wouldn't for one moment suggest that Constitution Hall should replace your usual position radio-side tonight. Not much, I wouldn't. That's where I will be.

Best novelty of the week: Clyde Beatty, animal trainer, will attempt to answer the question, "Are wild animals controlled by their master's voice or by his physical presence and actions?" in an interesting N. B. C. feature airing, WMAL, at 7:30. Beatty will direct his lions, in the steel arena of New York's Hippodrome, from Radio City studios through the use of a microphone and loud speakers. Animal authorities will watch the experiment with unusual interest. Many believe the lion will not do as directed because their obedience is based on their sense of smell.

The air's features today are dominated by honor paid St. Patrick:

From Dublin — Garda Ceilidhe Band and Irish vocalists, by short wave, WMAL, at 3:15.

Eamon de Valera — Irish Free State President, by short wave, WJSV, at 4:15.

Economic Problems — Created by decreasing population due to decline of birth rate, by Dr. George Kosmak, WJSV, at 4:45.

Andre Kostelanetz—and orchestra play "The Bee," which started the Allen-Benny "feud," WJSV, at 9.

Fred Allen—Born John F. Sullivan, goes Hibernian in a big way, WRC, at 9, in "Town Hall Tonight."

Irish Playlet—Original sketch by former members of the Abbey Theater, WMAL, at 9, in "Professional Parade."

Friendly Sons of St. Patrick—From Mayflower Hotel, with Senator Connally as chief speaker, WJSV, WMAL and WOL, 10:15 or 10:30.

Gladys Swarthout—Sings "Kerry Dance" and Frank Chapman sings "Little Irish Girl," WRC, at 10:30. Orchestra highlights "Eileen."

Here and there: Gracie Allen tonight will explain why shamrocks should be purple instead of green . . . Babe Ruth begins a new series via Columbia beginning April 14 . . . Jack Benny goes home to Waukegan, Ill., March 23 for a "Jack Benny Day." He has invited Waukegan's mayor to appear on his program in New York next Sunday night . . . Another Manhattan air show moves to Hollywood early in April. Grace Moore, new star of "Speed Show," returns to the West Coast soon and takes the show with her.

Inquiry on Vice In Naval Prison To Begin Today

Swanson Answers Bridges' Charges; Unbiased Group Will Investigate.

Charges brought by Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, of "extreme laxity of enforcement of prison regulations" at the Portsmouth, N. H., naval prison will be investigated at Portsmouth beginning today by officers not in any way connected with prison administration, the Navy Department announced here yesterday.

Earlier Bridges made public a letter he has sent to Secretary of the Navy Swanson, in which his allegations of irregularities are reiterated.

"Unconfirmed information has come to me of conditions existing in the Portsmouth Naval Prison which if true warrant investigation by your department of this prison," Senator Bridges declared.

"This information indicates extreme laxity of enforcement of prison regulations which it has been alleged to me has resulted in conditions existing among prisoners which should not be countenanced.

"If an investigation is made and you will have the officials who are designated to make the investigation communicate with me, I will be glad to give them such information as I possess.

Upon receipt of Bridges' letter, Secretary Swanson issued a statement announcing the investigation, and observing that the department "had no information indicating that discipline at this prison is other than strict and efficient or that conditions are not normal."

Duke of Windsor Cut Off Pay Roll Of Great Britain

By the Associated Press.

London, March 16.—Edward of England, a $2,000,000-a-year man in 1936, is off the pay roll and will get no pension from the British government.

Instead, the abdicated monarch must depend upon the royal family for any probable allowance from home, it became apparent tonight with submission of the civil list message to Parliament.

The message from his brother-successor, King George VI, made no mention of Edward, Duke of Windsor, but it did return to Commons the hereditary revenues from the Duchy of Cornwall. These formerly went to Edward, now living in Austria.

In return, Commons was asked to make provisions for certain members of the royal family.

Lady Rothermere Dies.

Johnson Reviews 20 Years in Senate

By the Associated Press.

Senator Hiram W. Johnson, of California, looked back over a score of years in the Senate yesterday and remarked that if he had it all to do over again "I would not alter my course one bit."

Johnson first took the senatorial oath on March 16, 1917. Reviewing a career that includes historic fights over the League of Nations and the World Court and two unsuccessful bids for the Presidential nomination, the Independent Republican said he often wondered whether it might not have been better had he retired from politics after one term as Governor of his native State.

But his final decision, he said, was that he took the right path.

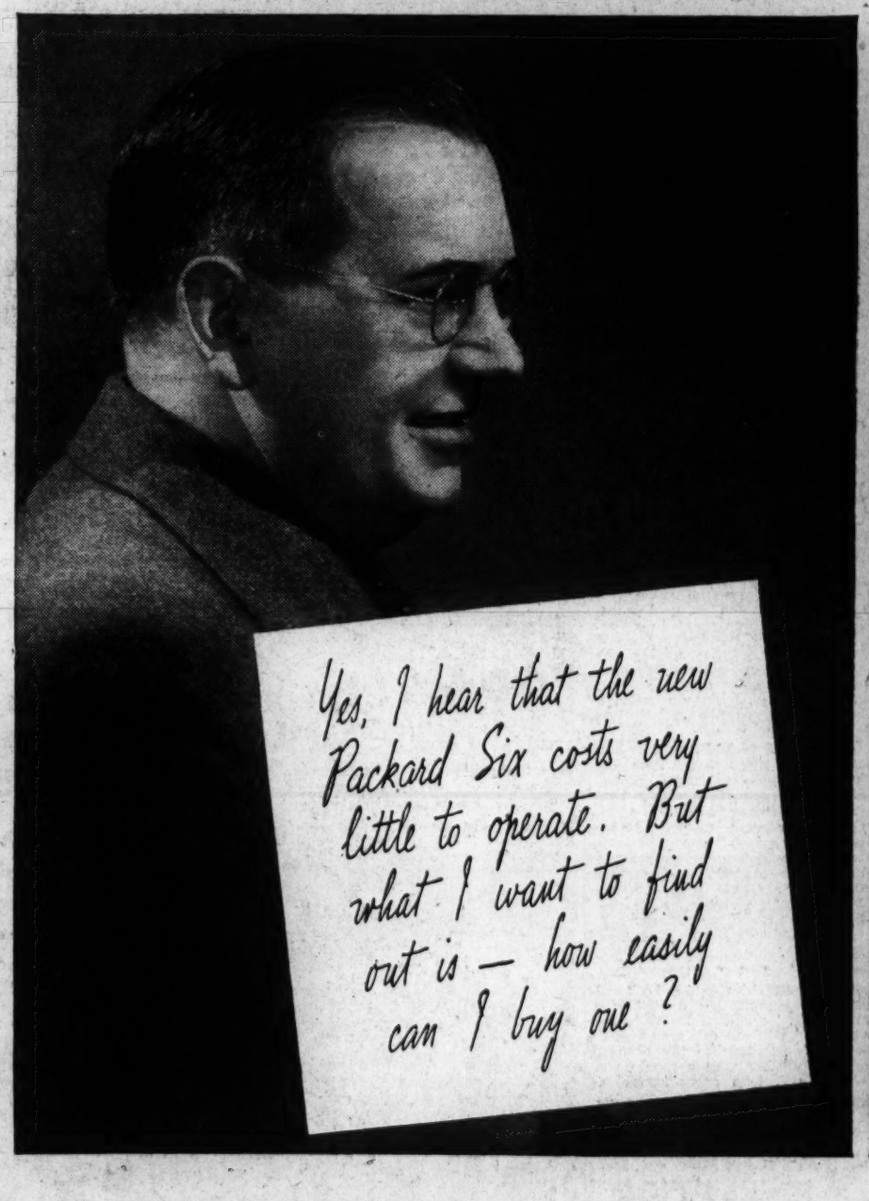
"HOW MUCH WILL A PACKARD COST ME?"

"ONLY $35 A MONTH, MR. JONES!"



Yes, I hear that the new Packard Six costs very little to operate. But what I want to find out is — how easily can I buy one?
The car you're driving now will probably more than cover the down payment. So you get your new Packard Six for only $35 a month!

SEND IN THE COUPON and you'll find that the Packard Six costs less to buy than you ever dared hope.

And here's more good news . . . the Packard Six can challenge any car for low-cost operation. This is true for two reasons . . .

First, because this powerful Six is unusually thrifty with gasoline. (Ask us to show you the actual gas mileage that local owners are getting).

Second, because the car is designed so simply that it costs very little to service. For example, most service operations can be performed on the Packard Six in less time, with less labor hours, than on cars lower in price!

And the Packard Six will not only need very little service but will last longer. This long mechanical life, coupled with the famous lines that keep Packards looking like Packards, make it the ideal car for the man who buys out of income.

Filmdom Chef Advises Meat In Stars' Meals

Rare Beef Diet Improves Performance, M-G-M Cook Declares.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, March 16.—A carnivorous school of drama is launched by Louis Albers, top chef of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer cafe, who believes actors less important than what's in 'em.

"Meat's the stuff," bubbled Albers with a flourish of his cleaver. "There's no performance that couldn't have been improved by 4 or 5 pounds of rare beef."

If Albers had his way—which he has not—Greatlover Clark Gable woud be run to earth before each romantic scene and made to cram down a double porterhouse, which the cook believes would make him give off sex appeal as a locomotive gives off steam.

Onions Are Out.

But no onion would garnish the dramatic dish.

"The onion," says Albers, "is an enemy of emotion, and the same applies to all vegetables. The effect of the potato is placidity, and in the artichoke there is no art.

"Sugar is good," he concedes, "but you've got to take it straight. It loses effectiveness in pie, cake or ice cream."

Red meat, however, is the stuff to give the troops.

For William Powell Albers prescribes veal, because of its "suave, even qualities." For a heavy, such as Joseph Calleia, he suggests a spot of pork or a chunk of mutton, but delicately refrains from recommending ham.

Three for Deanna.

Universal has three stories lined up for Deanna Durbin, 14-year-old singing prodigy, and all of them will probably be filmed within the year. First is the current opus tying up with Leopold Stokowski and his orchestra, "100 Men and a Girl;" second "A Queen at Fourteen," based on early years of Marie Antoinette of France, and the third an untitled original William Rankin is turning out.

Groucho Marx has given up trying to beat his son, Arthur, at tennis, and has turned the 14-year-old over to Fred Perry and Ellsworth Vines, who will shortly become instructors at the Beverly Hills Tennis Club, for tutelege.

Groucho could always beat the boy until a month ago when the youngster took him, 6—0, 6—0.

The elder Marx took lessons and practiced three weeks, then invited a gallery to witness his "comeback." He lost, 6—0, 6—0.

Little

"DINNER AT EIGHT," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the stage play by Edna Ferber and George S. Kaufman, adapted to the screen by Frances Marion and Herman J. Mankiewicz, with additional dialogue by Donald Ogden Stewart, starring Lionel and John Barrymore, Billie Burke, Wallace Beery, Jean Harlow, Edmund Lowe, Marie Dressler, Lee Tracy and scores more. Directed by George Cukor. A revival.

That fabulously star-studded production of August, 1933, "Dinner at Eight" was returned to the screen at the Little Theater this week as chief feature of the screen bill.

In this subject are assembled practically the complete roster of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stars, reinforced by a few draftees from other studios. Seldom has any product of the Hollywood studios been bulwarked with such an imposing array of acting talent as brings distinction to this remote release.

The story is adapted from the Edna Ferber-George S. Kaufman stage play and deals with the harassments of a host and hostess, attempting to salvage their waning fortunes by giving a dinner party to a long list of celebrities. One by one, the guests of honor fall by the wayside, for reasons which the film depicts in a series of episodes that are comic, dramatic and tragic by turns. The dinner turns out to be an almost complete fizzle, as the saying goes.

In point of personnel, production, direction and all of the other elements that enter into the construction of a serio-melodramatic drama, "Dinner at Eight" still remains one of the most imposing exhibits Hollywood is able to bring forth.

The feature is supplemented on the new bill at the Little by the usual alignment of short-reel subjects, including picturized news events of current interest.

Arctic Toes Sending Dr. Cook to Hospital

East Aurora, N. Y., March 16 (AP). An arctic explorer's "occupational disease" will put 82-year-old Dr. Frederick A. Cook in the hospital some day this week, he said tonight.

At his home here, Dr. Cook said that "long and continued use of "snowshoes" had permanently cramped and crippled his foot.

"About ten days ago infection set in on my warped toes," he explained. "I will go to a hospital within the next few days for an operation."

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

That Old Business of Casting Margaret Mitchell's "Gone With the Wind" Recurs With Cukor's Return

Now That the Director Expected to Make the Film Version of Famous Book Is Back From Europe, the Scramble for Leads in the Picture Is Revived; Goldwyn Favors Barbara O'Neill, Soon to Be Seen Here on Stage With Katharine Hepburn; Rubinoff Will Become Vocal; Chat of Theater.

THAT months-old turmoil over the casting of Margaret Mitchell's sensationally successful novel of "Gone With the Wind" is beginning to boil and bubble all over again.

George Cukor, celebrated for his direction of many screen masterpieces—including "Camille," with Greta Garbo and Robert Taylor; "A Tale of Two Cities," starring Ronald Colman, and "Little Women," Katharine Hepburn's outstanding achievement on the screen, to date—has just arrived back in America from Europe aboard the S. S. Normandie and has set the pot boiling once more. Mr. Cukor is to direct "Gone With the Wind" for Selznick International Pictures, Inc.

BELL.

Naturally, and this has been repeated so often that it is coming to be bromidic, the most difficult task confronting Cukor and David O. Selznick, the producer of Selznick International releases, is the casting of the principal roles in the Mitchell fiction. Every actor in Hollywood, from Clark Gable to Basil Rathbone, has been suggested for the rich role of Rhett Butler and a dozen or more great feminine stars are said to be active candidates for the role of Scarlet O'Hara, among them Miriam Hopkins, Joan Crawford, Bette Davis and Tallulah Bankhead.

No definite choices have as yet been made, pending Director Cukor's return to Hollywood from his European jaunt. Within a short time now, things ought to begin to hum on this production and something authentic emerge in the matter of information concerning the actual casting of the screen version of the novel.

One thing seems certain. None of the amateurs and semiprofessional players of the "little theater" groups about the country who were "tested" for the role of Scarlet O'Hara by traveling emissaries of the Selznick organization will have even an outside chance of securing anything more than a "bit" part, if any at all.

One begins to suspect that that "testing" gesture on Mr. Selznick's part was a far-flung publicity stunt shrewdly calculated to keep interest alive in the forthcoming production until the studio executives could get down to the actual business of putting on their show.

I trust those camera tests inspired no false hopes in the bosoms of the hinterland's aspiring thespians. If they did, it is just too bad.

That set of records comprising the full musical score of Universal's forthcoming production of "Top of the Town," sent me by my good friend Joe Weil, turned out to be a fine addition to any library of phonograph discs. Not having in my present possession an electric phonograph capable of doing the recordings justice, I presented the set to the Variety Club and heard them played on the new $500 Radio-Victrola that now adorns the club quarters in the Willard Hotel. I assume that I am privileged to extend the thanks of the club, as well as my own, to Mr. Weil for his thoughtfulness and generosity. His act is resulting in a very elegant preliminary ballyhoo for his "Top of the Town."

Samuel Goldwyn has cast his new candidate for screen stardom, Barbara O'Neill, the St. Louis debutante to be seen as second feminine lead with Katharine Hepburn in "Jane Eyre," rue at the National next week, in the most coveted role in "Stella Dallas."

Mary Astor originally was slated for this part, but was forced to withdraw from the role due to her protracted work in the making of "The Prisoner of Zenda." Goldwyn, however, retains Miss Astor under contract for a future picture being planned for her later use.

Miss O'Neill is under long-term contract to Goldwyn and will step from the screen remake of "Stella Dallas" into the choice part of Mme. de Laage in "Hurricane," co-starring Joel McCrea and Margo, under John Ford's direction.

"Stella Dallas" will co-star John Boles and Barbara Stanwyck, last seen together in "A Message to Garcia," with Anne Shirley featured and King Vidor at the helm.

My gratitude is hereby expressed to Mitchell M. Haddad for the kind words printed about that newsreel made for the opening of the Trans-Lux Theater, in the Alexandria Gazette of March 13. One feels, however, that Mr. Haddad's appraisal of our "acting" ability is a little on the side of overstatement.

* * * *

Dave Rubinoff, the violinist of radio and stage fame, and Alice Faye have been engaged for the leading roles in the Twentieth Century-Fox production of "Last Year's Kisses."

The dynamic maestro's previous efforts in feature pictures have been confined to his appearance in "Thanks a Million," in which he restricted himself to a purely instrumental expression of talent. Although he has been referred to as "the silent man of radio," never having spoken a word during seven years of broadcasting, present plans are for him to express himself vocally in the new picture.

What! Another Herman Bing?

It is pointed out to this column that Paul Whiteman, in his concert with Dr. Hans Kindler and the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall tonight, will present the most expensive four bars of music ever presented to a Washington audience. These four bars comprise a bagpipe interlude in the "Scottish Suite," by Adolph Deutsch, his chief arranger, which Mr. Whiteman will conduct. To play this brief passage, the "king of jazz" is bringing down four masters of the dudelsack from New York, is paying their salaries, railroad expenses and hotel bills. Divide the total cost by four bars and you have a pretty exorbitant price per bar. Incidentally, the bagpipers will be led by Angus Fraser, Chieftain and Head Piper of the Caledonian Society of New York, founded in 1867.

The Washington Civic Theater has retained two members of the staff of the German Embassy as technical advisers on the impending production of "Girls in Uniform." They are Marianne Munzel and Geraldine Jorn, both natives of Berlin and both familiar with the mode of operation of the school which forms the background of the play. They are attending all rehearsals to insure accuracy of detail and realistic effect.

Fearful-of-the-Worst Note.

Tonight is the night of the Variety Club's St. Patrick's Day "Cruise to Ireland," one of the most pretentious jamborees in the history of the club—and gosh how I dread it!

Child Dies of Burns.

Gloria White, colored, 8, 1320 W street northwest, died in Freedmen's Hospital yesterday from burns suffered when her clothing caught fire in her home. The child, police said, was enveloped in flames when she walked too close to a stove.

On Screen at RKO-Keith's Today

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Hollywood, March 16.—Idol chatter: C. Aubrey Smith looks positively nude sans that spreading mustache. Nifty Jack Oakie crack: "When Greta Garbo says she 'tank she go home,' she's really pleasure-Brent!" Are Conrad Nagel's rush of radio duties his excuse for playing hookey from his church-usher role? Professional weight-guessers have no luck with Joan Crawford, who does not look her heft. If a Warner studio director repeated "Muir-Muni, Muir-Muni" real fast, he might get either a pair of stars, or a salary boost.

* * * *

Jean Harlow's eyebrows seem to be forever saying, "Huh?" Jack Holt is well into his third, average-life-of-star (ten years) screen career. If Anita Louise would light a fire under her cold beauty, she might raise enough steam to carry her to stardom. Guy Kibbee reminds me of a small-town constable. Add onomatopoetic names: Parkyakarkus. Star-number still listed in the telephone directory (in spite of autograph fans): Beery, Wallace.

* * * *

Turtle soup on cafe menus makes me think of Clark Gable's high-neck sweaters. John Barrymore might have been a great trial lawyer—anyway he became a great trial. Peas from the same pod: Wendy Barrie and Betty Furness. Grace Moore seems not to give a whoop whether co-workers do or don't like her. It is amazing how many actresses with swimming pools cannot swim a stroke (that's why they invite handsome males to their parties, you silly).

* * * *

I strolled into Hollywood police station last night to see how the burglary business was getting along, and whom should I run into, but William Powell. We exchanged a few alleged smart cracks at which cops failed to laugh because they were old jokes around the tation. Then I learned that Clark Gable and William Powell had wanted to go on police calls. Clark took his turn a few nights before; now it was Bill's time.

* * * *

I rode with him on his first call, just to see what the detective of "Thin Man" would do. And luck would have it, the call was a murder, and en route to the scene I kept wondering why a movie star like Powell, who crabs about intrusions into his private life, should beg for publicity by riding behind a screaming siren.

* * * *

When we reached our destination, there were crowds of people—witnesses, neighbors, family of the corpse and onlookers. I watched Powell as he poked through the house. He wore his best Philo Vance look, but, by gosh, the same thing happened to him that had happened to Gable: Not a soul recognized him! I suppose the explanation is that tragedy has a way of leveling us all off to even-steven.

* * * *

I visited a Robert Taylor set the other morning just as a sweet young thing (obviously an out-of-town studio visitor) was saying goodbye to Bob. He was evidently her dream hero, and my heart went out to the girl as she strove valiantly to appear nonchalant about it all. She might have succeeded, too, had not Taylor displayed his molars and held her hand a trifle overlong in parting. At that she became flustered and stammered, "I'm glad to have met you, Mr. Taylor, and I soon I hope you again see."

"I'M MARY BOLAND," a lady announces at the Cotton Club, "and I want a table for us." She's accompanied by her dusky maid and a Pekingese. Miss Boland and her maid are seated—but her dog is checked . . . From a ringside box watching Cab Calloway's hi-di-ho-ing is Liberia's Minister to America . . . At the American Music Hall Phil Baker mounts the trapeze and swings above the shrieking audience . . . "This place used to be a church," Producer John Krimsky relates. "I want to build more of these places throughout America, but there aren't enough bankrupt churches. I checked up and found out there are more than enough bankrupt bank buildings" . . . "My husband, Ken Kelly, gets his medical degree April 1," Benay Venuta elates at the Versailles. "Here's the graduation gift I bought him. It's a kit—full of screwdrivers, nails, hammers and saws!"

GRACIE FIELDS, the British star, arrives at Joe DuPierrot's in an ermine wrap covered with orchids. "They told me not to dress," she tells Dick Gasparre, "so I left my gloves at home" . . . At the Artists and Writers Stanley Walker lures the suckers to play him match games, at $40 per . . . The ever-quoting Dick Maney shouts to Wolcott Gibbs: "Soft now, gentle Ophelia." "Wh-what?" Gibbs demands seriously. "Who's a failure?" . . . Peggy Garcia makes her theatrical debut at the A. W. A. "We don't expect you to do anything sensational," the lady who sued Rubinoff is told, "but give these people here some advice." Miss Garcia takes the stage and proceeds to philosophize: "First, never trust a woman by her appearance. If she looks dumb, she's probably smart. If she looks smart, she's probably smarter. If she's thin, fatten her. If she's fat, flatten her. Thanks so much for being nice to me. Good night."

"IF ANYBODY sitting behind you in a theater starts talking or chewing noisily here's what you do," Reggie Gardiner advises Bea Lillie at "21." "Just twine your feet around the legs of your chair and then hop up and down until they stop" . . . Dr. H. Valentine Wildman, the psychiatrist, dances lustily at the Sapphire Room. "If you keep on dancing those rhumbas," Vernon Rickert assures him, "I'll tell you you're crazy" . . . "Listen," the psychiatrist replies, "if you tell me I'm crazy, it doesn't mean a thing. But if I tell you you're crazy—mister, then it means something!"

AT THE TORRID Black Cat two strip-teasers discuss reprisals against Gertrude Lawrence—who had accepted Gypsy Rose Lee's absentee diploma from Minsky's Oriental. "Can you imagine," they lament, "Miss Lawrence refuses to return the diploma!" . . . "Jack Hemingway," a blueblood informs El Bolero, "left '21' and took the wrong bag back to Princeton. The owner of that bag wasn't worried about the jewelry in it. She was anxious only to recover the heat pad in it, which eases her rheumatic pains" . . . Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt dances to Emery Deutsch's tunes at the Rainbow Grill and listens to a friend groan: "I lost dough betting on your horse, Chance View, in the Santa Anita Derby" . . . "You're lucky," Vanderbilt replies. "You only bet on the horse. I still gotta feed it." . . . "We had to dig a well 254 feet at our Doylestown farm," Dorothy Parker states at West Fifty-second Street. "It was so deep we got a handful of Chinamen with every pail of water!"

"WHAT D'YA SAY?" Jimmy Durante proposes at LeMirage. "Let's all put on mackinaws, go over to Tony's and tease the boys there" . . . There was a big cleanup in the stock departments of some major film companies," a film official tips at Bertolotti's. "Last week some of 'em were caught selling first-grade movie films as junk. Bootleg theater operators were to exhibit 'em" . . . Lou Holtz and Broker A. Goetz discuss Wall street at Lindy's. "There should be a special stock exchange at night for people with my hours," Holtz proposes. "Let's start one now, here." He proceeds to make two trades—in Douglas Aircraft . . . J. Edgar Hoover enters and relates: "The cast of a Broadway show came to Washington recently and I showed them through my department. I told one of them, 'For example, put your fingerprints there and I'll show you how closely they resemble a convict's.' He refused. We found out why later. He was an ex-convict!"

Mellon Art Bill Near Conference

The Senate and House bills to establish the Mellon Art Gallery probably will go to conference this week, it was indicated yesterday.

Senator Connally (Democrat), Texas, said he would move at the first opportunity that the Senate bill be substituted for the House bill.

Chairman Keller of the House Library Committee, however, expressed the opinion that the House bill should stand and that the minor Senate amendments be eliminated. He said he would ask for a conference when the Senate bill reaches the House.

Dog Quarantine Ordered.

Wilmington, Del., March 16 (AP).—Dr. Roger Murray, secretary of the Board of Health, announced yesterday a quarantine on dogs until May 1. The quarantine was established by city and State officials after a dog which bit several persons and other dogs over the week-end was found to be infected with rabies.

Parachute Caught, Flier Is Dragged To Death in Field

Greenville, Ala., March 16 (AP).—An Army Air Corps transport plane dragged its parachuted pilot to death in a plowed field 9 miles from Greenville today after seven passengers jumped safely to avoid a crash.

Lieut. Carlisle W. Phillips, 29, of Scott Field, Ill., was identified through military records as the victim.

Glenn Stanley, of the Greenville Advocate, said the plane's motor went dead at 2,000 feet, shortly after it passed over this town en route to Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala., from training work at Valparaiso, Fla.

One by one, the passengers jumped. As the ship lost altitude rapidly, Phillips attempted to follow them, but his parachute was caught on the tail and he rode to earth with his ship.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Small-Town Girl, a Week in Town, Receives Invitation From Man Casually Met; Should She Accept?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A week ago I arrived in Washington to take a civil service job. The day after my arrival while going through one of the public buildings, I stopped at a telephone booth to read a letter. (There were no other chairs in sight.) A guard immediately came over to inform me the telephone wasn't working. I replied smilingly that I only wished to read a letter. He said, "I beg your pardon," but instead of walking away, asked me if I were not from a certain State.

* * * *

I told him what State I was from and in that way we started a conversation. He finally said he would be happy if I would consider him as a friend. I said I would, we shook hands, introduced ourselves and proceeded to get better acquainted by telling each other more about ourselves. He claims to have been here a year and not to have made any friends during that time; hence his wish to know me.

* * * *

He is about 25, of French-Italian descent. When I left the building he asked for my address and told me what car to take. That evening he called up. Several nights later he telephoned again and made a date for next week. I accepted eagerly, but am now rather doubtful. Do you think I should go with him? He is very flattering, and when one is just 19, from a country town, never having had a boy friend and being unused to such remarks, they make you think you like the person who speaks them. I'm afraid I rather flirted with him and that he may have the impression if he takes me out riding in his car that I am the type who will permit necking. But I am not.

Please tell me what you think I should do, as I do want to have a lot of fun while I'm here, and, of course, wouldn't object to having a handsome boy friend. Sincerely,

VILLAGE GIRL.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR VILLAGE GIRL: My honest opinion is that it would be rather a reckless thing for you, a 19-year-old girl with a small town background, who has never had a boy friend, to go out with a smooth-tongued stranger of different tradition and temperament, about whom you know exactly nothing except what he has told you. Since he stood on so little ceremony in getting acquainted with you and paid compliments with the ease of an old hand, one may reasonably doubt his story about having made no friends during his year here. Maybe he sized you up as an impressionable greenhorn and decided to take advantage of your naivete and loneliness.

I admit it is perfectly possible for persons to make agreeable acquaintances, who may through long association become valued friends, in just such casual ways as that described in your letter. But you, a mere schoolgirl, could better afford to run the risk of a pick-up friendship if you were city-broke, so to speak; if you were accustomed to making your way among strangers; if you had developed a sort of sixth sense which intuitively and accurately differentiated between the honestly friendly and lonely and those of trifling intent.

For my part, I would not care to assume responsibility for promoting this particular acquaintanceship, although I should feel equally adverse to denying you the opportunity for some social life during these first lonely days in a strange city. Therefore, do you know anyone at all in Washington to whom you could introduce the young man before going out with him? Is there some older woman—perhaps your landlady, or perhaps some woman who is staying where you are staying—who would consent to "look him over" and give her opinion as to his worth? If you can bring such a person into the picture at the very first, not only to pass upon the young man but also to represent a sort of guardianship over and protective interest in you, the face of the situation would be changed somewhat.

* * * *

As the situation stands, you could offer little in the way of rebuttal should the young man make objectionable advances. He might well say, "What else did you expect? You let me pick you up, didn't you?" I regret to say one meets with little idealism in the majority of men. They seem only too ready to believe the worst of the girl who is easily approached.

I believe the thing to do is to get in touch with the young man in advance of next week's date and tell him frankly you have changed your mind about going with him, and why. Tell him that much as you would like to see the sights of the city in his company, you have decided some form of proper introduction will have to be arranged before you can accept his invitation. If he tries to laugh you out of such a stand, laugh with him and admit you're probably just an old-fashioned girl, but stick to your decision. If he is a nice person and really interested, he'll admire you all the more for taking such a stand. And he'll arrange a third-person introduction somehow.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

As with all the ills of childhood which we are considering this week, it is fundamentally true that a healthy child performs the natural functions without the slightest effort. At the same time, an organically healthy child may become nervous, or fall into bad habits and develop some derangement which does not belong to a perfectly healthy child. The parents, remembering the ideal, become unduly alarmed.

Sleep is certainly a function which belongs in full measure to the healthy child. At the beginning of life, the baby sleeps nine-tenths of the time. The commonest cause of wakefulness in an infant, like the commonest cause of excessive crying, is hunger. As time goes on the baby begins to acquire eyesight and can place sounds, becomes aware of the sensations of hunger and their meaning, and the pleasurable sensations which come from contact of its skin with soft clothing and warm water—its interest in the world keeps it awake more and more. As the summer days lengthen out, the child will naturally be more and more wakeful in the evening. Don't put it to bed too early unless it is sleepy. It is acquiring an interest in the world.

Not Sign of Worms.

Other disorders of sleep which worry parents include teeth-grinding. In the old days the grandmothers used to consider teeth-grinding a sign of worms. It is only a sign of nervous and restless sleep. The best treatment is to improve the general physical condition of the child and see that it does not go to bed with two and a half hours after it has eaten supper.

Bed-wetting is another cause of mental anguish. It also is purely habit, not due to a diseased condition of the kidneys, but only to a lack of normal control of the bladder.

Treatment is not of much value until children are at the age of six or seven years, when they are able to understand what the physician and parents were trying to do. Two mistakes in the treatment are, first, to punish the child, and second, to wake it up two or three times at night and take it to the bathroom. Sometimes physical conditions, such as diseased tonsils or worms, are responsible, and the condition clears up when these are removed, but in general patient training and education will be all that is necessary in the way of treatment.

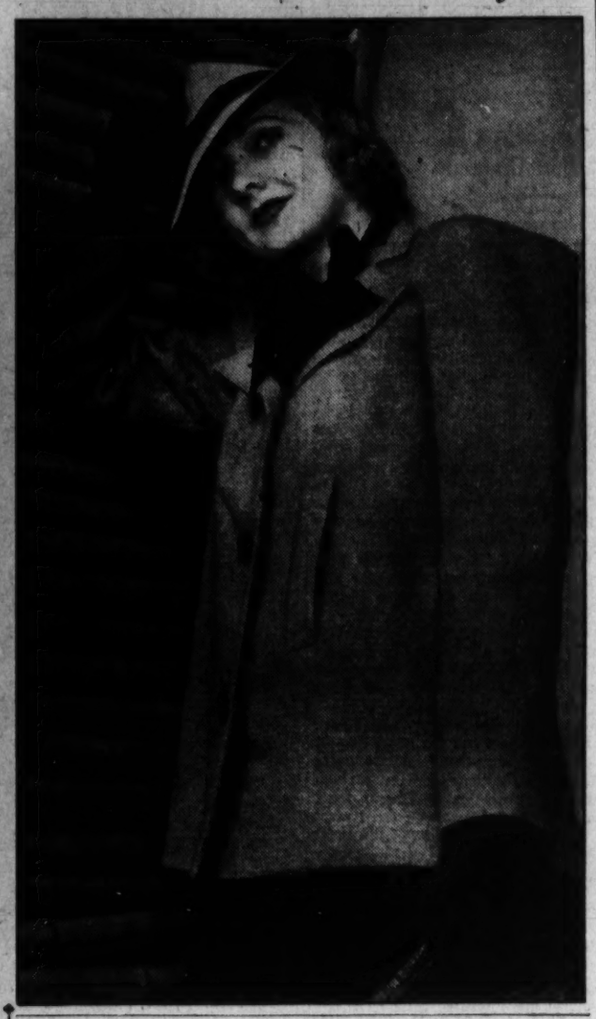
The Easter Coat—Soft and Feminine or Short and Youthful

The navy wool coat below has many distinguishing features; softly rolled collar, yoke, sleeve and cuff treatment, fitted waistline. The navy straw coolie hat with pearled white birds, by G. Howard Hodge. The swagger coat of mustard rodier wool (right), is lined and trimmed with black taffeta. A classic felt hat matches the coat in color tone—the other accessories are black. This youthful topcoat could accompany either suits or frocks, of the informal type. The navy novelty wool coat, while more formal in styling, is equally versatile.



New Spring Coats Show Frills, Such as Gores, Flares, Tucks

Feminine Influence Also Evidenced in Soft Collars and Unique Pockets; Styles Include 'Jiggers,' Redingotes, Swaggers and Long Models.

Your Easter coat is of paramount importance and requires advance planning as well as good judgment in its selection. Topping the new suit or frock, the aim should be to enhance the general picture; if not well chosen, it can detract and throw the entire ensemble out of harmony.

The Post's Fashion Editor, who recently attended fashion openings in New York and visited the merchandise markets, is presenting practical advice about clothes buying in a series of articles. Today she discusses the coat.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

The coats this spring are numerous in styling and the height of chic. In buying, however, always keep in mind the costume it is to accompany, and whether or not it will have to serve for any and all occasions, or will be augmented in the wardrobe by other coats. This makes a tremendous difference in the type of coat you select; there are some creations, however, which are versatile enough to complement practically all of your frocks and suits. This preplanning applies to colors and materials, as well as to the silhouette of the coat.

In fact, the secret of good-grooming is to have a well-defined color theme, and select everything in the wardrobe in harmony with this basic plan.

While there are coats which are decidedly sports, and others definitely of the "dress up" versions, all coats, following the general trend, are feminine in styling. The reefer and the redingote are extremely popular; the ballerina a bit more formal in character; the ubiquitous jigger coat tops either suits or frocks; the swagger, which is both fur-collared and untrimmed; and various other interpretations which combine many of the current style features.

All of these new coats are sponsored by fashion authorities, the selection depending on personal preference, and your height and weight. Numerous buttons and odd pocket treatments abound on all types of coats.

Since coats have gone feminine, the majority deviate from the classic straight lines and flaunt flared backs, gored skirts and back detail, such as stitching and tucking. Even the sports type coats are feminized by flaring soft collars and unique pockets. This type, however, is just about the only kind that introduces the shorter length—the others reach to the bottom of the skirt hem. In the realm of materials there are as many mediums for the new styles as there are styles. Soft tweeds, twills, plaids and mixtures of wool, polo cloth, a new fabric of wool and flax and novelty woolens are the most popular. The coat materials are all as new and interesting as the latest chic and youthful stylings.

The coat color chart emphasizes black, navy, gray and beige, with such high-fashion tones as Scotch rose, dusty pink, postman blue, fireman red, Coronation gold, red earth and pickle green. The beige family, besides neutral tones, includes grain and cereal tints and Brazilian beige. Gray ranges from pale hues, through smoke, British and Oxford tones. It is a season when color contrast and monotones are of equal importance; in both, however, carefully planning is imperative, or the result may be uninteresting and ludicrous rather than chic.

Read tomorrow, how to change your personality, by adopting varied style trends in your wardrobe.

Learn Dancing at Home

TO BE a popular dancer, scarcely able to circle the floor without a cut-in. That's every girl's dream.

What makes a girl fun to dance with? Perfect rhythm, featherlightness, responsiveness to every step and turn. A large order, but you can fill it if you have balance.

Modern ballroom dancing is based on balance. That's carrying your weight evenly over the balls of your feet—always. In dancing backward don't throw your weight onto your heels—or you'll find yourself being pushed like a balky wheelbarrow and your partner praying for the dance to end.

In stepping backward, keep weight on the ball of the forward foot until your stepping foot is in place, ready to share the load. Also, on backward steps swing from the hip and reach as far back as possible with the toe. Chopping off your backward step is just inviting the man to tread on your toes.

To be a really good dancer, you must know basic waltz, foxtrot, tango and rhumba steps, and be able to do them alone. Then you'll change from a lifeless follower to a graceful partner who knows what the man is going to do before he does it.

There's a real thrill and added popularity in store for you when you learn the fascinating steps explained and diagrammed in our 40-page booklet, "Social Dancing Self-Taught." Twenty-five important steps. Tips on leading and following.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Social Dancing Self-Taught," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, March 16.

ONE of my warm friends here is a girl named Kay Silver, a pretty style shark, and her husband is a fellow named George Sakier, famed as a designer of bathroom accessories calculated to make the old Romans look like barbarians. George tells me that, faster and faster, the bathroom is becoming the real luxury room of the home.

ALICE HUGHES.

Some of the newer gadgets are simply astonishing, George says. For instance, there's a book-rack, to be attached to the tub, which will also hold sheets of music, in case you want to trill a bit or practice the fiddle while in the foam. Then there's a bathtub tray that's more like a dressing table—there's not only room for soap, but for bottles and jars and well, and it has a mirror.

The newest thing in bath-mats, I hear, is a deep, luxurious one made of corduroy. It comes in all colors. A lot of the trimmings are being made of cut crystal. And as for wastebaskets, there's one of natural cork with a ship painted on it. Handsome paper guest towels are seen around, too, which certainly would cut down the good old laundry bill.

* * * *

I don't know—I always get a little jumpy when things that were once just useful get as fancy as all this. Of course, I shouldn't go so far as to say that the present civilization is actually cracking up, but there's something about these matters that reminds me of what happened to imperial Rome! Just another alarmist, I suppose!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Did you read that the Quints' fortune is now over $500,000, and that if all goes well they'll be worth a million in two or three years?, Bless my congress gaiters if that isn't something! What catches they'll be all too soon. That reminds me—I must teach the five-year-old Martin in my house to dote on Quints! . . . Ely Culbertson, the bridge whiz, tells me he's convinced that what the country needs most is a good two-handed card game, and that he invented one recently. Maybe by the time this is printed Ely's 4,000 teachers will be telling you all about it, and then you'll know more than I, for Ely was hush-mouthed on the subject when he got off the boat from a Mexican holiday.

Polish Ambassador Host To Painter at Embassy

Czedekowsky, Portrait Artist, Guest of Honor at Cocktail Party; Sigismund Stojowski, Polish Pianist, Among Talent Present.

By Dudley Harmon.

Practically all the Polish talent in Washington was assembled yesterday when the Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, entertained at a cocktail party at the Embassy. A well-known painter, a pianist, a young actress and a journalist, all distinguished, were present.

First, there was the guest of honor, the Polish painter, Czedekowsky, who with Mme. Czedekowsky and their daughter, Helen, is spending the season in Washington. Then there was Sigismund Stojowski, the Polish pianist who gave a concert last evening at the Willard, and for whom the Ambassador entertained later at a small supper. The distinguished list was completed by Mlle. Lili Valenty, a Polish actress who looks English, and who has the only feminine role in the new play, "His Excellency;" and Mr. Casimir Smodorvewski, who came all the way from Warsaw to write up Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal for newspaper readers in Poland.

M. Czedekowsky likes Washington so much he keeps coming back—this is his fifth visit to the Capital. During his brief stay he has painted a portrait of the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, in his favorite costume, riding clothes; Mr. Witold Wankowicz, Counselor of the Embassy, and Mrs. Jean de Sibour, daughter of the Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik. Yesterday Mme. Wankowicz acted as hostess in the absence of Countess Potocka, who is visiting in Charlottesville, Va.

Shown several of his paintings, most of the guests asked to see more, but unfortunately the artist left a large part of his work at his Paris studio. He plans to return there with his family in a few weeks, and then proceed to Poland. During their stay in Washington they have taken an apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street.

Mrs. de Sibour arrived with her parents to view her portrait again. Both she and Mme. Prochnik were dressed in black, and the latter's small hat was topped with an enormous pink rose. Others from the diplomatic set were the Greek Minister, Mr. Demetrios Sicilianos—he is a well-known connoisseur of art, and recently acquired an El Greco; Frau Scholz, wife of the First Secretary of the German Embassy; Dr. Ernest Meyer, also from that Embassy; Mr. Victor Mallet, Counselor of the British Embassy, and Donna Matilde de Suvich, wife of the Italian Ambassador, wearing a black cloth suit trimmed with silver fox.

Other guests were Mrs. Albert Dewey, recently returned from Nassau, and all in black, with a tiny, close-fitting hat; Mrs. Peyton March—Gen. March was decorated with the order of Polonia Restituta, one of the highest of that country's honors; the Netherlands Minister, with his wife and daughter, Mlle. Nora de With—the latter had on a wine-red velvet suit and her mother wore a bronze-colored satin gown with silver fox furs; Representative Sol Bloom with Mrs. Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom; Mme. Orlicz-Dresser, Miss Barbara Wright, Mr. Arthur Krock, Dr. Kemper Simpson and Miss Carolyn Chantry.

From the Polish Embassy staff there was Mr. Edward Kulikowski, with his sister, Mme. Kulikowski-Higersberger. They are leaving March 31 for Poland; and Mr. Michal Budry.

Walton Moore; the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Charles Edison; the Assistant Secretary of Commerce, Mr. J. M. Johnson; Consul General of Venezuela at New York, Senor Dr. Don Francisco H. Rivero.

Senor Dr. Don Jacinto Fombona-Pachano, Counselor of the Venezuelan Legation; Senor Dr. Don Arturo Lares, Secretary of Legation; Senor Don Luis Coll-Pardo, Special Tourist Commissioner of Venezuela; Senor Don Juan Lecuna, Attache of the Venezuelan Legation; Senor Don Marcos Falcon, Consul of Venezuela at Baltimore; Mr. Arthur J. Peru's Minister to Mexico Guest of Thomas Burkes

The Peruvian Minister to Mexico, Dr. Raphael Belaunde and Senora de Belaunde, who are here with their four children for a short visit, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke at dinner last night at the Mayflower, and went later to the dance given by the Counselor of the Yugoslavian Legation and Mme. Perazic. Mr. and Mrs. Burke met the Minister and Senora de Belaunde last winter in Florida.

The Burkes expect to go to New York today to say farewell to Mrs. Burke's brother-in-law, Gen. Juan F. Azacarate, former Military Attache of the Mexican Embassy, who is sailing tomorrow for Germany to assume his new post as Mexican Minister there. Gen. Azacarate left for New York last night.

The Third Secretary of the Mexican Embassy, Senor Don Alfredo Garduno, with Senora de Garduno, his sister, Senorita Maria Elena Garduno and mother, Senora de Garduno, leaves today for Mexico City for a month's leave before going to Bogota, Colombia, to assume his new post as third secretary at the embassy there.

Minister of Canada and Lady Marler To Entertain Chief Justice of Quebec

A musicale will follow the dinner at which Sir Herbert Marler, the Minister of Canada, and Lady Marler are entertaining on Saturday night. Among the guests at the function will be the Chief Justice of Quebec and Mrs. R. A. E. Greenshields, who will be in the Capital for the week-end.

Sir Herbert and Lady Marler will present at the musicale the Hart House String Quartet, of Montreal, which is to go to London for the coronation. The quartet was founded in 1924 by a former Minister of Canada to Washington, Hon. Vincent Massey, and Mrs. Massey and has since gained reputation as one of the foremost chamber music groups in Canada.

Lady Marler will not observe her customary Friday "at home" again until after Easter.

Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin is to spend a few days in Charleston, S. C., while Judge Goodwin is in Chicago on business.

Returns to Washington.

Representative Orville Zimmerman, who left Washington a few days ago with Mrs. Zimmerman for their home in Kennett, Mo., has returned to the Capital and is again stopping at the Roosevelt Hotel. Mrs. Zimmerman remained in Kennett.

Group of Young People Gather Again for Sports at Greystone

Underwood & Underwood.

For a number of years friends of Mr. Brooke and Mr. Thomas Armat have gone to Greystone, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Armat on Klingle road, to participate in winter sports in Rock Creek Park. Yesterday was the occasion for another of these gatherings, for there had been a fresh fall of snow. In the picture are Miss Caroline Cecil and Miss Alice Tuckerman who with Prince Ozman, Mr. Harry Calvocaress, Mr. MacDonald Goodwin and Brooke and Thomas Armate njoyed the skiing and the picnic luncheon that followed.

Belgian Note Of Good Will OnEnvoy'sScarf

Mme. Claire de Hedervary Is Guest of Press Women at Luncheon.

A scarf of white silk on which was inscribed the peace message of the King of Belgium was part of the costume of Mme. Claire de Hedervary, Belgian good-will emissary, who was one of the guests of the Women's National Press Club at its luncheon yesterday.

Mme. Hedervary was in a tailored suit of heavy black silk, with two rhinestone buttons holding the jacket together in front and a smaller matching button on each sleeve. With it she wore a small black hat trimmed in ostrich tips and the usual scarf, tucked inside her jacket so only a bit of it showed. The glimpse of the French words was enough to pique the curiosity of the newspaper women and, when she had finished her short address and questions were invited, the first was about the scarf. She removed it and held it up for the club members and their guests to see and later explained it had been sent her by a friend instead of flowers as a bon voyage gift.

Mme. Hedervary, who has been lecturing in her own country on the United States, is now talking on Belgium here. She pictured her country as a place where modern progress had not been allowed to destroy the charm of antiquity, and emphasized the important part women have in its affairs.

Floyd Dell, noted author, who is now residing in Washington, with Mrs. Dell, was another guest of honor and speaker at the luncheon. He presented an entertaining "off-the-record" discussion of creative writing.

Among other guests of club members were Mrs. Charles Collier, of Alexandria, who also spoke; Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Charles Clason, Mrs. T. M. Ralph, Mr. Charles Wood, Mr. Paul Ellerbe, Mrs. Carl Arnold, who is Olga Moore, author of "Windswept;" Mrs. Oscar Rand, Mrs. C. A. Millhouse, Mrs. William E. Barrett and Mrs. A. A. Dibble.

Mrs. Robert W. Imbrie To Honor Dr. J. E. Rauth

Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie will entertain at a luncheon in the main dining room of the Carlton Friday. Her guest of honor will be Dr. J. Edward Rauth, who will give the last in a series of lectures on Child Psycholoby Friday morning at the Carlton.

The lectures are for the benefit of St. Gertrude's School of Arts and Crafts. Mrs. Imbrie is president of the St. Gertrude's Guild.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

It was a party with a capital "P" that the Nikola Perazics gave last evening in their home in Georgetown. We'll wager you a pretty that Washington will be talking about it from now on.

Starting with our ascending a turning flight of stone stairs from the street—up and up until we came out on a flagged terrace, with Washington and Virginia across the river stretching out as so much rhinestone-studded black velvet—until the last guest took himself home, it was indeed a gay evening.

The house, which is on P street, was formerly the old Dumbarton Club before Alexander Kirk took it over, and up until the Perazics discovered it, it had been vacant for eight years. If houses have any feelings, we'll bet its high walls are simply delighted to be re-echoing with music and laughter again. The Perazics, who love to netertain, and who do so beautifully, were hosts in honor of Olga Patterson, who is here for a brief visit before rejoining her father, Dr. Patterson, at his new post in Mexico.

Now for a few Whirlographs:

The ohs and ahs of the guests as they made inspection tours all over the house, admiring the furnishings, views, and size of rooms—

The ballroom with its stately square columns and those marvelous Turkish divans that one sits on way, way back, sinking into cushions and having one's feet yards from the floor.

The vivacious hostess greeting everyone and wearing a princess gown of filmy white tulle over satin, diamonds in her hair, at her throat and wrists.

The tall, good-looking host, busying himself making everyone at home.

Olga in a frock of orchid chiffon over fucia, dancing by with "Pancho" Villa.

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

Orlando, Fla.

It is none of my business, and the same thing goes for Rogers Hornsby, but since he has brought the matter up I might add that I don't see eye to eye with him in his appraisal of the comparative worth of Lou Gehrig and Dizzy Dean.

POVICH.

Noting that both Gehrig and Dean are demanding $50,000 for their playing services next season, Mister Hornsby rushes to the defense of Gehrig and puts the rap on Dean. "No pitcher is worth $50,000 in my way of thinking," says Hornsby in the public prints, "but if there's one guy in baseball that is entitled to a $50,000 salary, it's Gehrig."

The eminent Mr. Hornsby says he bases his position on the fact that while Gehrig is in the line-up every day driving in runs for the Yankees, Dean is working for the Cardinals only every fourth day, on the average. Thus, Dean is not deserving of the same wage as Gehrig, as Hornsby figures it.

• • • •

Come, come now, Rogers. How long since you've been so naive, as to believe that club owners pay ball players on a basis of performance? Have you forgotten about those little gadgets outside the park called turnstiles whose gyrations pump the very life-blood into baseball?

• • • •

No? Yes? Well, then, that's why Dizzy Dean is entitled to collect a salary fully as great if not larger than Gehrig's. Dizzy may not be in the line-up every day, but on that fourth day that he does pitch, he puts more money in the till than Gehrig draws, individually, in a month. Did you ever see a dream walking? Or a baseball fan get excited because Lou Gehrig was in town?

• • • •

Your man Gehrig is just a journeyman ball player, albeit a fine one. He does a very workmanlike job with his bat and around first base, but Jonathan Q. Public wants personality out there on the ball field, not a robot who is impervious to the presence of the fans. Lou may pull plenty of pitches out of the park, but it's Dean who pulls the fans through the gate.

• • • •

Because it's always a show with the unpredictable Dizzy out there pitching, the Cardinals have only to present the great Dean as their pitcher and the game is a financial, if not a competitive, success. Because the fans want to see Dizzy laugh as he strikes 'em out, stamp and rant as he gets a bad decision from the umpire or, mayhap, turn on an erring teammate with all the fury of an enraged lion.

• • • •

Even as Ruth had that profitable asset—color—the great Dizzy has it. Like Ruth, he capitalizes on both success and failure. Even as the fans cheered Ruth for his home runs, and chortled also as he struck out, they applaud Dizzy in his victories and find equal satisfaction in his defeats. They get a thump out of Dean, win or lose.

• • • •

Did you ever hear anybody boo Gehrig? Neither did I—at least, nothing more than a gentle, perfunctory boo. There was none of that great, gleeful booing that Ruth and Cobb used to elicit. The ball player who was never booed loudly and lustily never was, paradoxically, a great favorite with the fans.

• • • •

You may have your Gehrigs, Rogers, and your Gehringers and Blueges and Foxxes and Lazzeris and those other swell, even-tempered ballplayers, and I'll take the Deans and the Buck Newsoms and the Johnny Allens and the Jake Powells and the Lefty Groves and the Wes Ferrells. I'll take the temperamental fellows. They may be 98 per cent temper and 2 per cent mental, but I'll take 'em. You'll have the pennant, Rogers, but I'll have the most cash in the till.

• • • •

What do you think keeps Buck Newsom on this Washington team, his pitching? Well, then, Clark Griffith in the past two months has had a half-dozen offers for Newsom and Griff has no particular liking for the big fellow, but he's honestly afraid to trade him.

• • • •

Griffith may not have great respect for Newsom's pitching ability, but he has a wholesome respect for Blustering Buck's magnetism out there at the turnstiles where the public pays the freight.

• • • •

It's All Right to Use Left in Ring Especially Way Dempsey Did It

(This is the third in a series on how to box. The writer can't box oranges, so he has turned to the masters for descriptions of their pet punches or specialties.)

By Bill McCormick.

The story of many a lost fight might well be titled, "The Left That Failed."

A straight left punch can be both an effective defensive and offensive weapon, as Gene Tunney demonstrated in pecking Jack Dempsey out of the heavyweight championship.

The left hook is the most effective punch in a fighter's repertoire.

Our instruction in the jab will come from Tommy Loughran, perhaps its greatest master. From Tunney's fights we will learn of the straight left punch and Jack Dempsey will explain the left hook.

The jab seldom is a punishing blow, but it can play havoc with an opponent's mental equilibrium. Many a bout has been won on points scored by flicking the left into a bewildered face.

The jab is one of the few blows that should be thrown when the deliverer is either moving forward or in reverse. It is usually so light that it makes no difference whether it is landed while its pusher is running backwards or charging.

Jab Very Simple.

Trying to get by a good left jab is like attempting to poke your head through an electric fan. In delivering the blow, the extended left arm is drawn back just a few inches and, as one's opponent follows it in, the arm is straightened out. Automatically the opponent is poked in the profile. It is as simple as that.

Ordinarily, jabs should not be thrown one at a time, but should come in bunches, like bananas. One should never get in the habit of throwing a certain number of jabs before following up with a more effective punch. Joe Louis fell into that habit and the fault helped Max Schmeling knock him out.

Joe settled into routine of always tossing two jabs before doing something else. Schmeling utilized the split second between the two punches, while Joe's left hand was drawn back, to crash over the right that finally felled the Brown Bomber.

Loughran tossed jabs like confetti. Short and to the point, they kept most of his opponents so busy spiting leather out of their months that they didn't have much time to fight back.

Hook Spelled P-o-i-s-o-n.

The straight left punch serves a dual purpose, as we have said. Defensively, it is very valuable for knocking back a charging opponent. Offensively, it can inflict almost as much punishment as a right cross. It has one great advantage over a right in that it does not lay its user open to a sucker punch in return.

Tunney dropped his left slightly and pulled it back until the elbow almost touched the body. As his opponent, scenting an opening, stepped in close to deliver a telling wallop, Tunney shot the arm straight out.

The left hook, usually spelled "P-O-I-S-O-N" by those on the receiving end, not only is dangerous, but it is very difficult to dodge or block. The "hat-tipping" right hand, described in the first of this series, is supposed to block it.

The only fault with the right as a defense is that when the hand is high, the hook can be sunk into the body. If the right is low, to protect the midriff, a left hook can be landed to the head. So, if you ever find yourself facing a good left hook, you'd better tear up these articles and subscribe to a series of curling lessons.

Hook Is a Hook.

The hook is exactly what its name implies. The first is thrown in an arc, like a golfer's hook, to the objective. The elbow is held close to the body, which moves with the blow, until just a split second before the maulie reaches its target.

In delivering the hook, one usually steps inside of, or under, a lead. The right is kept close to the body until just before the blow lands, when it, too, is divorced from the torso and readied for a right swing, for which the left hook naturally sets one up.

The Dempsey one-two is a refinement of the simple hook. It consists of ramming the fist to the body, withdrawing it quickly, then ripping it to the head while the opposition naturally is expecting a follow-up right. Of course, if the opposition seems to expect the switch to the head with the left hand, you can shoot the right. Under the circumstances, what chance has an opponent, especially if you're fighting a punching bag?

The Dempsey one-two is the most difficult fist maneuver the ring knows. If you don't think so, hang up a nice juicy pillow and try it. All of which leads us to the best method of developing the left hand.

Jack Kearns, who piloted Dempsey to the heights, fastened the Mauler's right behind his back and

Country's Greatest Milers Run in K. C. Games Tonight

Cunningham, San Romani, Venzke and Beccali Meet in 'Columbia' Event; 16,000 Expected to Pack Garden for Track Meet.

By the Associated Press.

New York (Wednesday) March 17.—Subject to the pacing whims of the four best milers available, a capacity crowd of 16,000 in Madison Square Garden tonight likely will witness the fastest test of the board-track campaign in the feature race of the eighteenth annual Knights of Columbus games.

The Columbian mile, climaxing a brilliant indoor track and field season, brings together the renowned Glenn Cunningham, four-time winner of the event, and his three foremost rivals, Archie San Romani, Gene Venzke and Luigi Beccali.

It tops a program otherwise starring Syracuse Eddie O'Brien's attempt to retain honors in the "Casey 600," Indiana's triple entry in the 2-mile run, led by Don Lash, and a high-jumping jamboree among the winter's six best performers.

By limiting the mile field, K. of C. promoters have risked repetition of last year's tactics which produced the "world's slowest mile."

As an indication that he may, if necessary, force the pace himself, Cunningham suggested today it would require something like a 4:10 performance to win and pronounced himself capable of touching that figure. Glenn set the world indoor mark of 4:08.4 in the 1934 Columbian mile.

Beccali, Italy's 1932 king of the metric milers, has shown such rapid improvement in his few indoor starts that he rates as the dark-horse threat.

O'Brien's bid for 600-yard honors will pit him against a picked group, including Dusky Jim Herbert, New York University freshman ace; Dick Gill, of Boston College, and Charley Beetham, Ohio State flier.

Ben Johnson, recently crowned intercollegiate champion in Columbia's colors, will match speed with Perrin Walker, of Georgia Tech; Eulace Peacock, of Temple; Sammy Richardson, of Toronto, and others in the 60-yard invitation dash.

Ed Burke, Marquette's sensational high jumper, who cleared the indoor world record height of 6 feet 9¼ inches in his last Garden appearance, will meet such other human kangaroos as Corny Johnson, of Los Angeles, the Olympic champion; Dave Albritten and Mel Walker, Ohio State stars; Al Threadgill, of Temple, and Artie Byrnes, Manhattan College freshman.

G. U. Relay Team To Compete

Georgetown University's speedy mile relay quartet will face Manhattan, Princeton and Boston College in an invitation race, while Doug Hanks, a miler, and Stuart Reeves, half-miler, will compete in individual events. Reeves will run in the K. of C. 600-special.

Giants Trounce Bees.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 16 (AP).—The New York Giant scored six runs in the fifth inning, when Mel Ott belted a home run with two on base, and defeated the Boston Bees 8 to 6 in an exhibition game today.

Didrikson's Golf Leads Patty Berg

Aiken, S. C., March 16 (AP).—Mildrid "Babe" Didrikson, Beaumont, Tex., professional, won the qualifying medal today in the first annual Aiken Women's Invitation Golf Tournament with a 73, 1 over par for the 5,418-yard layout.

Patty Berg, Minneapolis school girl and carefree Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., tied for runner-up honors with 76s.

Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, co-favorite with Miss Berg before the late entry of the long-driving Texan, was well back with 81.

Tech Honors Gridmen At Game and Dance

In an effort to give Tech High's football team the gold footballs it failed to receive from the school after winning the interhigh championship, the Circle-T Club has scheduled a game between the Tech Basketball Team and the alumni for Friday night in the Tech gym. A dance will follow the game.

Among the grads facing Coach Rusty Thompson's fast varsity will be Bill Rea, Reds Daly, Andy Farrell, Milt Mullitz, Wesley Snow, Everett Russell, George Hahn and Jimmy Roland.

Lanahan, D. C. Boy, To Start on Mound; Cohen to See Action

Harris to Use Sington in Clean-up Role; Myer Idle Due to Stiff Neck; Pitchers Begin to Curve Ball.

By Shirley Povich,
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 16.—With something akin to bated breath, Manager Bucky Harris awaits the coming of the New York Giants to Tinker Field tomorrow. Mr. Harris has no particular interest in the Giants, but he would like to ascertain their reaction to the pitching of young Richard Lanahan, of the Nats.

Probable Line-up

Nats.	Giants.
Chapman cf.	Chiozza, 3b.
Lewis, 3b.	Hartell, ss.
Kuhel, 1b.	J. Moore, cf.
Sington, rf.	Ott, rf.
Stone, lf.	Leiber, lf.
Travis, ss.	McCarthy, 1b.
Mihalic, 2b.	Mancuso, c.
Bolton, c.	Danning, c.
Hogan, c.	Whitehead, 2b.
Lanahan, p.	Schumacher, p.
Appleton, p.	Castleman, p.
Cohen, p.	Coffman, p.

Mr. Harris is scenting in Lanahan all the specifications of a big league pitcher, and what with the Nats needing good young pitchers no less than the late Mr. Hauptmann needed a pardon, Mr. Harris is quite impatient to appraise young Richard under the fire of big leaguers. To that end, he has given the former High School left-hander the starting role in tomorrow's festivities with the touring Giants, which are expected to lure 3,000 natives, at $1 per head, to Tinker Field.

Thus tomorrow, Orlando's Chamber of Commerce will begin cashing in on the Nats, who have been using Tinker Field gratis and were given a $3,500 guarantee to make their training quarters here. But the gate receipts of their exhibition games, minus the visiting clubs' shares, reverts to the C. of C.

Lanahan has been assigned the first three innings of the Nats' pitching duties and will be followed to the mound by venerable Pete Appleton and swarthy Sidney Cohen. Appleton, already accepted as a regular on the Nats' staff, has little to risk, but Cohen, like Lanahan, will be under the severe scrutiny of Harris.

That Bucky is now definitely committed to his plan to replace Johnny Stone in the clean-up hitting role with rookie Fred Sington was again apparent today, when he announced the Nats' line-up for the battle with the Giants. The two batting orders read:

Under orders by Clark Griffith to win every exhibition game if possible, Harris will not insert his rookies in the infield or outfield if the score is close. Should the battle develop into a lop-sided affair, the Nats' youngsters will see action.

Buddy Myer's absence from the line-up is still attributed to his painful stiff neck, but the team will suffer little defensively in the presence of Johnny Mihalic at second base. Mihalic has also begun to impress Harris with his clever hitting.

The ban on curves was lifted in the Nats' morning workout, and virtually every hurler was displaying his own pet hook. It didn't stop the wave of hitting, though, and Cliff Bolton, Cecil Travis, Johnny Stone and Joe Kuhel continued to whack all types of pitching to distant fields.

Dallas Show To Include 5 Major Sports

Marshall Lists Marathon, Track, Soccer, Football, Boxing, Auto Racing.

Five major sports will be arranged by George Marshall, director general of sports program, for the Greater Texas and Pan-American Exposition in Dallas starting next June, it was announced by the Washington promoter yesterday.

Football, a 1,200 marathon, Pan-American track and field games and soccer, boxing and automobile racing will be on the program. Other sports usually held in connection with such expositions will be promoted by others under the supervision of Marshall.

The program will open with the marathon, which will be run over the Pan-American highway from Mexico City to Dallas, starting between May 15 and 20 and finishing in Dallas the opening day of the exposition, June 12.

Each country of South and Central America, the United States and Texas will be represented by one runner each. Cash prizes totaling $10,000 will be distributed among the first six finishers. The winner will receive $5,000.

Dean Asks Cards To Let Him Retire

Sarasota, Fla., March 16.—Dizzy Dean, Cardinal ace whose demands for a $50,000 contract were rejected last week by Sam Breadon, revealed tonight that he has asked St. Louis to authorize his retirement from organized baseball.

Diz, one of the most colorful figures in the national game and an outstanding right-hander of all time, disclosed from his home in nearby Bradenton that he already has set in motion machinery to permit his retirement.

Woof, $11.90, Closes With Rush to Win in Tropical Park Sprint

Filly Takes Feature by 2 Lengths

Lord Tournament Saves Second Money; Yetive Finishes Third.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 16.—Dropping down into a more suitable spot after apparently being outmatched in four previous outings this winter, Mrs. E. A. Rotelli's brown filly, Woof, easily captured top honors in the Atlantis Handicap, a 6-furlong event for Class C horses that headed today's program.

The 3-year-old daughter of Bull Dog, paying $11.90 and well handled by Albert Schmidl, came from close off the leaders to click by two lengths in 1:12 2-5. The Medway Stable's elderly gelding, Lord Tournament, took second money by almost as wide a margin from J. M. Zimmer's Yetive. Silver Fleece, the favorite, lacked early speed and could only finish fourth in the field of six.

Another large crowd viewed the sport under ideal conditions, a warm sun beating down all afternoon on a fast track.

Patsey Begone and Lord Tournament ran themselves into defeat in the feature. Patsey was quickest to find her stride and led Lord Tournament past the first turn, then the filly began to hoist the distress signal. Lord Tournament drew into a clear advantage. Schmidl, who had Woof running easily behind the two leaders in the early stages, sent his mount through on the inside as the field swung around the turn for home. Woof drew up to Lord Tournament and dashed clear. Yetive finished with a belated rush and was wearing down the tired Lord Tournament at the end.

Scotch Queen, steady going mare, was allowed to go to the post at the liberal odds of $23.60 for $2 in the first race here today. The daughter of Scotch Broom-Balkan Queen then romped home a breezing winner by three lengths. King Bee was almost as easily second over the odds-on choice, Good Dame, which received a weird ride from Jack Westrope. The latter, leading American rider in 1933, sent Good Dame to the front but was joined by Scotch Queen at the far turn. Under weak handling, Good Dame dropped back as Scotch Queen drew away. King Bee also ran over Good Dame in the last furlong.

Dirigible, slight favorite over the slow-breaking M. J. Brennan, staged a powerful rally in the final quarter mile to win the second race in easy fashion under Hubert Le Blanc. Dixie Princess had four lengths to spare over Robert S. for the place. Dixie Princess disposed of Robert S. and Hermanita and looked a winner as she entered the last furlong with a comfortable lead. Dirigible, coming from fourth place with a rush, ran over the pacemaker to return $5.70.

Coming through on the rail with an undeniable rush, the $9.90 for $2 shot Count Rae drove to a length triumph in the fourth race. Air Line was second, a length and a half better than the favored Malmaison. Air Line shook off Miss Trophy and Miss Dignity in the early running,

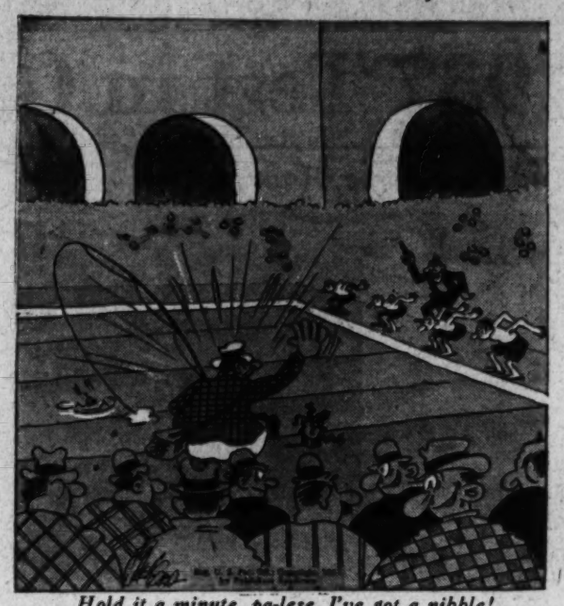
Time Out!

By Chet Smith



Hold it a minute, pa-lese, I've got a nibble!

Postgrad By Lewis Atchison

Older and heavier than when he played halfback for a couple of Knute Rockne's best Notre Dame football teams, Jack Elder was apprehended yesterday in the act of watching Catholic University's gridmen charge over an imaginary gridiron in the spacious Brookland gym.

Pleasant and round of face with a double-chin ready to burst into full bloom, Elder tips the Fairbanks 183 pounds now, a weight he couldn't have made with a sack of cement under both arms while in Notre Dame's backfield. He is still light and fast on his feet, although not the terrier he was as a collegian when he met and defeated some of the best sprinters in the business.

Coaches Vote Out Center Jump

Colleges Try New Rules For Season

Tap-Off Kept Only for Start of Halves; Only 9 Are Opposed.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 16.—The National Collegiate Basketball Coaches Association voted today to recommend to the rules committee that the center jump in basketball be eliminated except at the start of regular and overtime periods, for a one-year trial period.

The vote was 70 to 9.

The group also voted, 42 to 25, to recommend to the rules committee that the half of the foul circle nearest the center be freed from the three-second rule restriction.

This change, if adopted, would permit players to remain in this area indefinitely without possession of the ball, but still would restrict him to three seconds occupancy with possession of the ball.

May Decline Shot.

The coaches also decided, in the future, that on a technical or personal foul, the offended team may decline the free throw, or free throws, and take the ball out of bounds, putting it in play from the side court. When two foul shots have been awarded, the offended team may shoot for the first one and then, declining the second, may put it in play from the sidelines.

This action was taken largely for the purpose of reducing instances of rough play under the basket after foul shots.

George Edwards, University of Missouri cage mentor who had been a vice president, was elevated to the presidency, succeeding Dr. Harold Carlson, of Pittsburgh. Other officers chosen were: First vice president, William Chandler, Marquette; second vice president, B. T. (Butch) Grover, Ohio University; third vice president, Nat Holman, College of the City of New York; secretary and treasurer, John Bunn, Stanford.

G. U. Ready to Start Practice for Baseball

Baseball practice at Georgetown will get underway this afternoon or tomorrow with indoor battery work under the direction of Joe Judge, recently appointed coach. The main body of the squad will not report until weather conditions permit outside work, according to Judge's plans outlined yesterday.

Nick Nicketakis, southpaw ace, Mike Petroskey and Tony Barabas are the only veteran hurlers available, and only two are coming up from freshman ranks, Hank Bertrand and Charley Reynolds. Mario Gregorio is the only varsity catcher held over. He will draw Joe Keegin, a sophomore, in opposition for the regular berth.

Jack Espey Is Honored By G. W. Sports Staff

Jack Espey, retiring director of sports publicity at George Washington University, was singularly honored by members of the athletic staff yesterday afternoon when presented with a three-letter G. W. certificate. It was signed by Jim Pixlee, director of athletics, Max Farrington, graduate manager, all coaches and captains of all teams for the current school year.

Usually reserved exclusively for athletes, Espey is the first noncombatant in history to receive one. Although it lists baseball, football and basket ball as his achievements, Espey never engaged in any major branch of sports.

Georgetown Ladies Bowl Into 2d Place

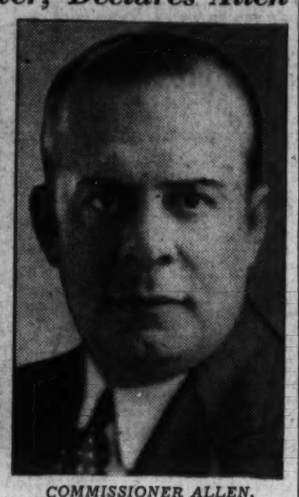
A clean sweep over Christ Church, while Trinity was dropping the odd game to St. Paul's, gave Georgetown the championship of the Ladies Lutheran League last night at Arcadia, winning over the second-place combination by a single game. It was Georgetown's second straight pennant and sweet revenge for two years ago when it lost the title to Grace by a margin of six pins, when total pinfall decided the issue after the race ended in a stalemate.

Reds in Bat Drill.

Tampa, Fla., March 16 (AP).—Trying for greater power at the plate, Manager Dressen sent his Cincinnati Reds through a lengthy batting practice today with veteran pitchers tossing up the offerings. Phil Weintraub, the former Giant trying again to land a regular job in the major leagues, blasted a drive to the race track in centerfield.

'We Can Beat Hoover,' Declares Allen

J. EDGAR HOOVER.



COMMISSIONER ALLEN.

Commissioner Sure His WPA Team Will Beat Chief G-Man's Investigation Aces for Post Trophy in A. A. U. Tourney Tomorrow.

By John R. Vosburgh.

If sharp words are flying up and down Pennsylvania avenue between the offices of Commissioner George E. Allen and Mr. J. Edgar Hoover, blame it on their basketball teams. Mr. Allen's very efficient District WPA squad is prompting the Commissioner to make all manner of comments and Chief G-man Hoover is equally voluble about his Bureau of Investigation basketeers.

The teams tangle tomorrow night in the final round of The Washington Post tournament for the District A. A. U. unlimited championship. Both Commissioner Allen and Director Hoover expect to be among the spectators in the Heurich gym as the teams sail into action at 8 o'clock and neither is anything in the nature of pessimistic.

In fact, the Commissioner was decidedly fluent in optimistic comment yesterday.

"We can beat Hoover anytime," said he with enthusiasm. "He may be able to catch 'em (apparently referring to kidnapers) but we'll do a little catching ourselves. I'd surely hate to miss that game."

Hoover Is Keen Fan.

Director Hoover has seen openly proud of the smooth-passing Sleuths all season and watched them polish off the Rinaldi Tailors, Monday night, with a look of complete satisfaction. Whether the satisfaction will prevail tomorrow night is indeed a question but remarks emanating from the F. B. I. offices would indicate that the Hoover smile will not be erased.

Director's predictions on the outcome will not be presented until tomorrow's paper, when he will give rebuttal to the above remarks of the Commissioner.

Meanwhile, both teams have been whipping themselves into the flawless form of a couple of supercharged motors. Investigation, balked in its quest of the championship last year, has settled down to a grim mission of revenge. The G-men have lost but three games this season and one was to WPA in an early-season tournament game by a 2-point margin.

Lost to G. W. Frosh.

This has upset the Investigation boys all season and it is reported that the Federal agents avoid the subject whenever it comes up. The other two games the G-men lost were to the George Washington Freshmen and the Rinaldi Tailors, also by 2-point or 1-point margin. It happens the G. W. Freshmen, holders of the championship, were disposed of in convincing fashion by WPA Monday, the same night Investigation was rubbing out the Rinaldis, 41-21.

Among the chief trouble-makers for Investigation will be WPA's Ollie Tipton, Bobby Lucas and the former Eastern High stars, Dope Dean, Chick Hollidge, Reds Scheible and Bill Noonan.

An older and taller team, Investigation will roll out such howitzers as Glen Bethel, former Minnesota U. and McPherson Oiler expert; Jimmy and Herb Thompson, of Duke; Bernie Jones, of Roosevelt High; Forrest Burgess, of G. W.; Tommy Lynch, of Mount St. Mary's, and Nelson Colley, of Duke, to mention only a few.

Tribe Wins 3d Straight.

New Orleans, La., March 16 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians made it three in a row today over the New Orleans Pelicans in a game that was called after eight innings. The score was 14 to 3—the reason for its premature end.

Hal Trosky clouted out two triples in three times at bat. Bruce Campbell rifled a triple and two singles, bringing in three runs.

How to Box

made him do all his shadow boxing, bag punching and sparring with the left. That is an extreme case, but it produced extreme results.

Many managers and trainers make right-hand crazy boxers do everything possible with their left hands. Try buttering your toast, reaching for the salt and pepper, scratching your back, answering the telephone and everything else you can think of with your south paw. The chances are, that by that method you will in time become ambidextrous—which is what all good boxers should be and can't spell.

Even a Loughran, Tunney or Dempsey would not recommend carrying that left hand development business to extremes. Doing such things as signing checks and shaving with the port paw lead to disaster when practised by a natural right-hander.

(Tomorrow's article will deal with the knockout right, as explained by Maj. Harvey L. Miller.)

Wild Koverly Here On Mat Tomorrow

"Wild George" Koverly, whose wild antics in local wrestling rings resulted in a couple of riots and forced Promoter Joe Turner to ban him for six months, will bounce back at Turner's Arena Thursday night, grunting with Mike Sterlich, seasoned trouper, in one of three preliminary bouts.

Rudy Dusek, captain of the "Dusek riot squad," and his kid brother, Joe, will be featured. Rudy will meet Hank Barber, Jewish star, and Joe will clash with Ed Meske in the double wind-up bouts.

Wee Willie Davis, whose roughness cost him disqualification in a bout with Ed Meske last week, will meet Jim Coffield, and Bluebeard Bill Lewis, colorful Richmond grappler with the elongated beard, will tackle Harry Finkelstein.

Reds Sign McChesney.

The Washington Redskins Eastern pro champions, added another player to their 1937 roster yesterday when Coach Ray Flaherty announced from Dallas, Tex., that Bob McChesney, an end, had signed.

Weighing 195 pounds and standing 6 feet 1 inch tall, McChesney shared the left end duties with Wayne Millner.

G. W. High Eliminated By Western

Red Five Wins, 29-16, in Tourney; Mt. Rainier Victor.

Western High, interhigh champion, advanced to the semifinal round of the Metropolitan District championship with a 29-16 victory over George Washington High of Alexandria last night in the Tech High gym.

Mount Rainier High split in two games, the boys' team winning an overtime thriller from Washington & Lee High last night, 31-27, to advance to the semifinals, while the girls' sextet bowed to Bethesda-Chevy Chase in the afternoon, 42-20. In last night's preliminary, George Washington High's girl team eliminated Washington and Lee, 24-8.

Western had little trouble in passing the first round, soundly trouncing the Alexandria team. Hugo Schulze put on a one-man scoring show in the last period, scoring nine straight points, to top off a rough, exciting game. Flying fists, hurled at Schultze by Dodo Robinson in this period brought about the Virginian's expulsion and when Paul Heil retaliated in Robinson's direction, landing several solid blows, he, too, was put out of the game.

Mount Rainier High's boys team was extended two overtime periods before conquering the Washington and Lee five, from Ballston, Va. Trailing 20-12 going into the third period, the Marylanders caught the Generals at 26-all just as the regulation game ended.

George Washington girls, led by Margaret Peterselia, outclassed their Virginia girl friends to win handily. They will meet Bethseda-Chevy Chase for the crown.

As a Promoter, Brooke Grubb Blushes Unseen

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

If perchance you'd be seeking a promoter with the combined qualities of Jimmy Johnston, George Marshall, Bill O'Brien, Mike Jacobs, C. C. Pyle and Joe Engle, to mention a few, Brooke "Oscar" Grubb, Silver Spring's showman, is the answer.

Brooke has put on everything from steeplechase races to pie-eating contests. His achievements include baseball, basketball, boxing and wrestling shows, football, bowling and old-fashioned free-for-alls.

Brooke is confronted with the task of putting his Silver Spring Giants ball club on the field again, a Capital City League entry. He's busy rounding up collegians, high school boys, worn out veterans, former major leaguers and escaped convicts to round out the club.

Brooke's adventures started as far back as 1917, when as student at Tech High, he played with Brooke Lee, former Speaker of the Maryland House; Blair Lee, now a prominent Philadelphia banker, and others, on a field by the spring for which Silver Spring was named. Spectators came in buggies or traveled as far as the District line on street cars and walked to the field.

His first trip out of Silver Spring was with the Washington baseball team on their spring training trek to Tampa. Brooke was farmed out to Hanover in the Blue Ridge League.

The next year he went to Chattanooga's training camp and was farmed out to Cleveland, Tennessee, in the Georgia State League. In his prime, Brooke was leading the league with a .350 average when he suffered a broken leg. He returned home, out for the season.

For the next three years, Brooke toured the smaller Virginia towns, St. Charles, Coalfield, playing three years in each. In 1927 he decided to see the Pacific Coast and while out there, he spent six weeks in spring training with the Hollywood team, of the Coast League. Brooke returned after being released and organized the Silver Spring Giants. This was in 1928.

In 1929 Brooke saw a need for basketball and Stuart, Harrington, Boerner, Heiser and Barnard, formed the first pro team in this section, playing in the Silver Spring Armory. He gave the Miami Collegians a $50 guarantee. The whole town turned out but Brooke claims he lost money. In fact, he claims he has yet to break even, just like a big timer.

Brooke's baseball teams have seen a lot of ups and downs. He's traveled every small town in the Middle Atlantic sector. His teams would be garnered to suit the opposition. One week he'd manage to snare the cream of the local sandlot crop for a tough game, but the next week he would have an entirely different team, both under the name of the Silver Spring Giants.

Added attractions on the Kensington diamond, to get the crowd, would include pie-eating contests, steeplechase, fungo hitting, base running, and field events. One of the high lights of his baseball career was the game with the Chicago Bloomer Girls. Brooke lost 17 to 16.

It was against the Giants that Jake Powell got his chance, he was opposing the choice offerings of Brooke's twirlers when Clark Griffith snatched him off the sandlots into a big league uniform. Jake has played for Brooks, as have other major leaguers, including Larry Boerner, Walter Beall, Bobby Stevens, and Jim Murphy.

Sandwiched in between his major sport enterprises, Brooke tells of a disastrous turtle-racing affair, in Winchester, Va. A storm blew down the tent, grandstand and washed away Brooke's turtles. Two championship bowling teams scored under Grubb's guidance. Donkey baseball was the latest sport under his wing.

The Kensington and Silver Spring armories have presented boxing and wrestling shows under Brooke's guidance. He's helped Zeke Linkins put over the Silver Spring Merchants eleven.

Brooke's favorite baseball player over the 20-year span is Brooke Grubb, second is Ray Stevens, his first sacker last year.

His favorite experience happened on the Huntington, Md., diamond, several years ago. The locals were at bat, with a man on second. Brooke's pitcher caught the base runner napping but he ran out of the baseline and slid back into second safely. Brooke came running in from the outfield to the country umpire and yelled, "Man, don't you know there's an imaginary line there, he can't run out of that."

The ump looked at Brooke, gazed down at the ground, spat and said, "Wal I 'magine there ain't; man's safe, play ball."

Lead Break Halts Advancing Metals

New York, March 16 (AP).—The first break in the five months' bull market in domestic lead occurred today when two leading producers reduced the price by .25 of a cent a pound to 7.50 cents a pound at New York and 7.35 cents at East St. Louis.

C. H. Crane, president, at the annual meeting of St. Joseph Lead Co. last week, termed the situation "unhealthy." Declining stocks in the country might lead to a shortage, he said, and any further price increase might benefit aluminum, especially in the making of foil.

Lead, with copper and zinc, has risen repeatedly in price since the present forward surge in commodities began last October. Most of the rise was credited to expansion in industrial needs and the current war preparations in Europe, with price rises mostly being initiated in London.

Sales of copper for export were made at the equivalent of 17.225 cents a pound. This compares with transactions yesterday at from 17.33 cents to 17.625 cents.

Rubber Quota Raised to Meet Heavy Demand

Allowable Exports Are Increased to 90 Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 16.—The International rubber regulation committee increased today rubber export quotas for the second half of the year to supply expanding demand, especially in the United States.

Permissible exports from producing countries were raised to 90 per cent of the basic quotas from 85 per cent, the allowable originally set for the three months starting April 1 at a meeting of the committee in January. The upward revision was explained as aimed to take care of increased demand for rubber for general purposes, as well as for armaments.

New York, March 16.—Traders in the New York Commodity Exchange greeted the increase in rubber export quotas today by boosting crude rubber for future delivery more than 1 cent a pound in heavy trading. March rubber sold at 24.60 to 24.70 cents a pound and July at 24.65 to 24.75. A similar rise took place in London.

Rubber has been one of the fastest-advancing commodities in recent weeks, despite successive boosts in the export quota from 75 per cent in the first quarter of the year. For immediate delivery it has been selling around 23½ cents a pound compared with about 16 a year ago.

N. Y. Stock Exchange Reports Profit for 1936

New York, March 16 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange reported today a profit for 1936, the first since figures have been made public, beginning with results for 1932. Profit was $172,768, compared with a net loss of $209,325 in 1935. Total income last year was $8,086,860, compared with $7,049,183 in the preceding year.

The exchange is not organized for profit. Today's revelation of an excess of income over expenses last year was seen as the explanation for the recent reduction in annual dues of members by $50 a quarter.

$100,000,000 Bills 2.47 Times Subscribed

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Magill announces that the tenders for two series of Treasury bills, to be dated March 17, 1937, which were offered on March 12, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

Tenders were invited for the two series to the aggregate amount of $100,000,000, or thereabouts, and $247,384,000 was applied for, of which $100,093,000 was accepted.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Advance in Moderate Trading; U. S. Bonds Weak; Wheat Higher.

New York, March 16.—Stock prices advanced in most sections, but commodities were mixed. Government bonds developed acute weakness, in spite of the promise and the performance of active buying by the Federal Reserve banks and the Treasury. Turnover in stocks was around 1,750,000 shares. Top prices were reached in the early trading, and the market suffered no material setback. May wheat closed ¾ of a cent higher at 137 cents a bushel.

Prices for standard industrial shares hardened, but the rally was the most noticeable in the low-priced riffraff. Possibly the stock market speculating section was emboldened by the emphasis being placed by officials at Washington on the development of inflation. Steel issues generally rose 2 points. Bethlehem recrossed the 100 mark. Gulf States jumped more than 4 points. U. S. rallied to 123. Consolidated Edison led the utilities higher. Rails strengthened 1 to 2 points. Santa Fe, Central, Southern Pacific and a number of receivership issues were popular.

The oil section returned to favor and oil supply stocks advanced. Jersey and Texas were leaders. The motor list was firm, but traders were cautious and probably will continue to be until the Governor of Michigan makes up his mind on a little matter of helping to enforce court orders. Chrysler was fractionally higher. Some of the mining stocks were down, but most of the coppers move forward. The market seemed to find the Nickel earnings report a little below expectations. Reduction of lead prices helped to keep down enthusiasm in the metal group.

Eye Rubbing.

For all its supposed infallibility the Washington Administration feels obliged to take notice of such natural forces as the securities markets. A concrete case today was presented by Marriner Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, who took his cue from the severe break in Government bond prices last week and the resumption of the decline yesterday. Whatever molasses may be spread upon the bread distributed at the evening radio "chats," Eccles is enough of a practical banker to know that money rates rather than abstract ideas of "faith" in the Government largely govern prices for Government bonds.

The drop in Government bonds has compelled the Administration to say something reassuring to a market which, ever since last summer when the Federal Reserve Board said it would remove inflationary material by lifting bank reserve requirements, has been preparing for higher rates. The second cut at excess reserves, now under way, combined with the speculation in commodities and the expansion in business activity, has intensified the fear of tighter money. It wouldn't do to let matters go too far, for the banks hold about half our swollen Federal debt of thirty-five billions and the banks must maintain the appearance of solvency.

Difficult Trick.

The Administration is nevertheless in a dilemma. Mr. Eccles, while promising that cheap money will be continued (that is, of course, if he can turn the trick), restates his belief in the soundness of the balanced budget principle. Whatever he may say about it himself, or no matter how often he must silently listen to the tripe served on the table by others in the Administration, Eccles knows perfectly well that no superficial measure for credit control is likely to prevent an inflationary boom so long as the Government is running a huge deficit.

He is on sound ground when he proposes a balanced budget as a preventive of an inflationary boom and as the "only process" that can prevent "monetary inflation," which would be even worse than credit inflation. Eccles incidentally recognizes the fact, and apparently it is the first time that any high New Deal official has admitted that money control is not everything, that other than monetary controls are needed to stop inflation.

The sad part of it all is that the very officials who a few weeks ago saw no danger of inflation are the ones who now are asking (through revision of the Supreme Court to permit a new NRA) for authority to gain complete control over the entire economic field. The economic managers at Washington scarcely have acted in a way to build confidence in their ability to control our economic lives; they haven't realized we already were in midstream of inflation.

One Way Balance.

Another sad part of the whole affair is that, even when some one does decide to do lip service to sound economic principles and advocate the balancing of the Federal budget, he never thinks about the simple and logical—as well as the only possible way of doing the thing. Far be it from the New Dealers to cut expenditures; they only can suggest higher taxes, regardless of the fact that tax revenues now are perhaps the highest in the history of the country and are ample to balance any peace-time budget that any country still in mental equilibrium should have.

Wall Street could not learn much from Washington to aid it in planning on the next move. Commentators from the Capitol volunteered that the views of Mr. Eccles were "not necessarily" those of President Roosevelt. Moreover, a good deal of doubt exists as to how long money rates for long-term bonds can be kept low, no matter how great the desire. Likewise, it will be difficult to reassure people that, since we have gone so far with inflation in piling up so many billions of debt on bank credit, we are not going to have a boom in spite of all control attempts that any politician will make.

Price Barriers.

On the other side of the picture some anxiety is felt lest the boomlet that already has taken place might not be succeeded by at least a short slump. The rapid rise in metal prices probably have brought some opposition from consumers, just as the steep increases in wheat, cotton and livestock prices are alarming wage earners and others who have to make both ends meet with their family budget. Eccles blames it on greed and monopoly; the one which seems to have the support of the Administration, so far as striking for shorter hours and higher wages is concerned, and the other which it is proposed to foster and perpetuate by means of a new NRA.

The first reaction of the Government bond market this morning to the Eccles statement was another crack in prices. Well informed bankers here learned that country banks through the country are selling their Government bonds with as much haste as they can afford to make. Two forces are now at work. One is the uncertainty of the banks as to just what is the policy of the authorities, for they are puzzled by the inconsistency of the Federal Reserve Board's promise of easy money at a time when higher reserve requirements are being put into effect and when a balanced budget is held up as a necessity if an inflationary bust is to be avoided.

Tradng in Pierce Halted by Exchange

New York, March 16 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange suspended trading today in common stock of the Pierce Petroleum Corporation, which is in liquidation, acting on information indicating a lower value for the shares than the recent market price.

The exchange explained that its committee on stock list had been informed that the liquidation dividend probably would not exceed $1 a share. The stock has sold as high as $4 this year and closed yesterday at $1.50, up 25 cents, after heavy trading. The suspension was held in line with the exchange policy of safeguarding investors.

And in practically every case, they have a sharp note of contrast! Huge gold monograms—and initials are newer when they're in a feminine script! Interesting metal frames! Bandings of patent leather! The Hecht Co. has a stunning collection of new gabardine bags—priced so that you may own a different one for every costume.
